the Fee or Seignury

Crown of England. I say, Relieving of the Crown.

nor or Barony in England was at one Time or other Created by the King. Originally, or in its First Creation, it moved from the King Himself, the Chief Lord of the whole Realm; and could be holden immediately of no other Lord. For example. The King enfeoffed a Man of a Great Seignury in Land; to Hold to the person enfeoffed and his heirs, of the King and his heirs, by Baronial Service, to wit, by the Service of Twenty, Forty, Sixty Knights, or of such other number of Knights, either more or fewer, as the King by his Enfeoffment limited or appointed. But of these matters I shall have occasion to speak at large hereafter in this Volume.

III. In the ages next after the Conquest, when a Great Lord was enfeoffed by the King of a Large Seignury, such Seignury was called an Honor; as, the Honor of Gloucester, the Honor of Wallingford, lingford, the Honor of Lancaster, the Honor of Richemond, and the like. It might be also called a Barony.

There were in England certain Honors which were often called by Norman or other Foreign Names, that is to say, sometimes by English and sometimes by the Foreign Name. This hapned when the same person was Lord of an Honor in Normandy or some other Foreign Countrey, and also of an Honor in England. For example. William de Forz, Desforce, or De Fortibus, was Lord of the Honor of Albemarle in Normandy. He was also Lord of Two Honors in England, to wit, the Honor of Holderness, and the Honor of Skipton in Craven. These Honors in England were sometimes called by the Norman Name, the Honor of Albemarle, or, the Honor of the Earl of Albemarle. In like manner, the Earl of Britannie was Lord of the Honor of Britannie in France, and also of the Honor of Richmond in England. The Honor of Richmond was sometimes called by the Foreign Name, the Honor of Britannie, or, the Honor of the Earl of Britannie. This serveth to explain the terms, Honor of Albemarle in England, Honor Albemarlæ, or, Comitis Albemarlæ in Anglia; Honor Britannie, or Comitis Britannie in Anglia, the Honour of Britannie, or, of the Earl of Britannie in England. Not that Albemarle or Britannie were in England; but that the same person respectively was Lord of each of the said Honors Abroad, and each of the said Honors in England. In like manner, the Earl of Boulogne or Boloigne had an Honor in the Boulonois in France (a). He had There a Sedes Baronialis. He had also an Honor and a Baronial Seat in England. His Honor in England was called Honor Boloriæ or Comitis Boloriæ. In brief the Seigneur de Grentemeisnil had an Honor in Normandy, called the Honor of Grentemeisnil. He had also an Honor or Baronial Fee in England. His Honor in England was styled Honor or Baronia de Grentemeisnil. The like may be said of the several Honors of the Earl of Ou, the Earl of Moreton, and others.

This was the manner of speaking used in England, in those times when the Lands of the English and of the Normans were Common, that is, when the English held their Lands in Normandy,

(a) In Old times, the Boullenois parts of Normandy. Berauld Coust. de
and other territories were taken to be Norm. in quarto, p 5.

and the Normans their Lands in England. This Community of Lands between the English and the Normans began at the time of the Conquest, and lasted till the reign of K John. After K John had lost Normandy, he issued a general Proclamation or Precept to Disseise all the Normans of their Lands and Rents in England. Which Precept was effectually put in execution. As appeareth in the case of Stephen de Clafford (b), the Abbess of Preaux (c), and in other instances. And as the King of England disseised the Normans of their Lands in England: So the King of France disseised the English of their Lands in Normandy. However, whilst England and France were upon these terms with each other, the King of England made several Grants or Feofments under his Great Seal to his own Subjects or others, and his Subjects made many contracts with one another about Lands and Rents, just as if they expected Normandy would soon be recovered and reunited to the Crown of England; as in the case of Geofrey de Sachevill. (d), Robert Marmium, Margaret Countess of Win-

IV. In ancient times, a Baronial Estate was wont to be called by several names nearly of the same import, to wit, Honor, Baronia, Terra, Feodum, and sometimes, but seldom, Tenementum. The Baronial Seignury of an Earl or other Great Baron was commonly called an Honor; as well whilst it was vested in such Earl or Baron, as afterwards when it became vested in the Crown. We meet with the Barony of Adam de Port (f), the Terra of Earl Simon of the Honor of Huntedon and Gant (g), the Feodum of Wahull (h), the Tenementum of several Barons (i). But manifold Proofs of these Things may be found in this Book, and in the History of the Exchequer (k).

V. A Land-Honor or Barony is so called, because it was annexed and united to Land. It was bounded by a determinate extent of ground; like as a Manor Liberty or Ferme was bounded. Thus Cattel was said to be driven out of one Barony into another. In the twentieth year of K Edward I, it was Found by an enquest of Jurours, that Alice de Seynmor drove several head of Cattel belonging to Margery de Monselowe into another Barony; so that Margery was deprived of her Waynage for Forty days (l). More-

In the eight and twentieth year of K Henry III, it is said in the Kings Writ, that according to the Assise of the Exchequer, and the Custom of the Realm, the King might betake him to the Baronie of a Bishop, if at the Kings command, the Bishop did not distrain the Clerks of his Diocese, to pay to the King the debts which they owed him. And it was done accordingly, in the cases of the Bishops of Exeter and Saresbury (m). In the forty-fifth year of K Henry III, the Bishop of Norwich was commanded by a Writ of the Exchequer, to distrain Roger de Weylaund by his Ecclesiastical Benefices, to appear and answer in the Exchequer. And if the Bishop did not cause Roger to appear at the Exchequer accord-accordingly, the King would betake himself to the Bishops Barony (n).

VI. In the modern times, men have generally spoken with great confusion and uncertainty concerning Honors. The Word hath been strangely tossed about amongst the Lawyers, for want of a distinct notion concerning the thing.

In this instant Century the subject of Barony hath been very much tortured in Pamphlets and Frivolous books: Books beneath Mr Selden's Fame for Learning, and especially beneath the Dignity of the Subject.

But this is a light matter. There is much confused and indistinct Discourse upon this subject contained even in the Law-books.

One cause of that confused way of speaking seems to have been this.

gas prædictum Episcopum, quod venire facias coram prædictis Baronibus ad eundem diem aliquem de suis, qui nobis possit respondere de carucag[i]o terrarum suarum quod nobis debet, sicut nobis constat per rotulos Scaccarii nostri. Et habeas —. Communia 28 Hen. 3. Rot. 10. b.

this. Men have been too apt to forget the difference between Land-Honors and Titular Honors; and to attribute some of the properties of Titular Honors to Land-Honors, and of Land-Honors to Titular Honors.

Honors of Amptbill &c. erected.

IN the reign of K Henry VIII, some men seem to have thought an Honor was onely an illustrious Manour or Lordship, or severall Manours united, having one Capital Seat. Thus certain Manours belonging to the Crown were Then created Honors, or adorned with That title; as if thereby they were made more Noble. The Kings Manour of Amptbill with its members and appurtenances, was by Act of Parliament erected into an Honor; in order to make it the more Sumptuous and Princely (o). In like fashion the Kings Manour of Hampton Court was made an Honor (p). And for the like reason of Splendour, the Manour of Grafton piscopo, quod distringat Rogerum de Weylaund &c. quod habeat eum hic in Octabis Sancti Michaëlis. Et nisi; Rex capiet ad Baroniam &c. Rot. Placitorum Scaccarii 45 Hen. 3. Rot. 10. b.

(o) An Act touching the Honor of Amptbill.

Considering that the Kings most excellent Majestie mindeth and intendeth, by the grace of God, to erect build and edifie upon his Graces Manour of Amptbil in the Countie of Bedford, sumptuous stately beautifull and Princely buildings—. It seemeth therefore very behovefull expedient and requisit, that not alonely —, but also ought of all conveniencie in reason to be ornated and set forth with the name and title of an Honour, thereby insinuating and declaring that the thing shal be no lesse honorable and princely in rich and faire possessions, then stately and commodious as well in things of pleasure, as in sumptuous and costly buildings. Wherefore be it enacted —. Statut. 33 Hen. 8 cap. 37. Seçt. 1. typis Nortoni & Billi 1618.

(p) An Act whereby the Kings Mannor of Hampton Court is made an Honour, and a New Chafe thereto belonging.

Forasmuch as it hath pleased the King our most excellent and most dread soveraigne Lord, of late to erect build and make a goodly sumptuous beautifull and Princely Mannor, decent and convenient for a King, and the same hath ornated with Parks gardens orchards, and other things of great commoditie and pleasure thereunto adjoyning, meet and pertinent to his royall Majestie ——. Section 1.

— And that the same Mannor of Hampton Court, together with all other the said Manors lands tenements, and other the premisses above rehearsed and specified, so united and annexed to the same Mannor of Hampton Court, shall from henceforth be named ton was also erected into an Honor, in the same reign (q). From these three instances it appeareth, that the true nature of an Honor was not distinctly understood or duly regarded by him that penned those Acts. For observe, if you please. The Manour of Hampton-court, by force of one of these Acts is made and declared to be an Honor; viz. It shall be styled an Honor: It shall be composed of several Manours united together: And it shall have a Capital Seat, to wit, the Manour of Hampton-court. What operation then hath this Statute. It hath this operation. By It Hampton-Court is made an Honor in name. It hath been ever since and must be hereafter called an Honor. Besides that, it is made an Honor in some particulars of Resemblance; to wit, as it is now composed of several Manours combined, and hath a Capital Seat. Thus it hath gained some of the properties of an Honor. In truth, it is made an Honor of a New species; such a one as never was, I think, in England before the reign of K Henry VIII. For let it be considered. The essential and distinguishing property of an Honor vested in the King was to be a Barony escheated. If Hampton-Court which was not an Escheat or Barony escheated, before the making of the Act, it was not Escheat or Barony escheated, after the making of the Act, or by vertue of it. If it was not in fact an Escheat, an Act of Parliament could not alter the nature of it, and make it an Escheat.

A Manour, of which the King was seised in demeane as his primeval inheritance, and which never was in the tenure of a Feudatary, was not wont to be called an Honor.

These Statutes were founded in great measure upon this fancy, that a Manour or Estate was made more Noble or splendid by being titled an Honour. For I cannot see how a Royal Manour, which was part of the Kings Original Patrimony, could be made more Noble by bearing the Baronial title of an Honour. Moreover; if a Manour or Estate vested in the Crown never was a Barony or the Capital Seat of a Barony, it could not be an Honor properly speaking. If it was part of the Kings Original Inheritance;

med called accepted and taken the Honor of Hampton Court; And that the said Mannor of Hampton Court shall from henceforth be the chiefe and ca-pitall place and part of the said honor of Hampton Court. Statut. 31 Hen. 8. cap. 5. Sect. 1 & 3.

(q) Statut. 33 Hen. 8. cap. 38. Sect. 1.

tance; if it never was aforetime vested in an Earl or Baron, and did not come to the Crown by Escheat; it was not properly an Honor. It might indeed be created an Honor, or rather a Nominal Honor. But such Creation could not alter the nature of it, or make it to be an Honor in fact; that is to say, it would not make it a Baronial estate if it never was one, nor an Escheat if it never was one.

The abovenamed Honors of Amptbil, Hampton-Court and Grafton were the First Land-Honors that ever were created or erected by Statute; and probably will be the Last.

For proof of this point the following case may suffice instead of many.

Lady Gerards case, a^o 7^o Will. 3.

IN the Seventh year of K William III, a Cause pended in the Court of Kings Bench relating to the Lord Gerards Barony. The main question was, Whether the Lord Gerards Widow should be endowed of the Chief Mansion or Seat of her deceased Husband. The Counsel against her alleged that she should not; For by the Law of England, said they, the Widow of a Baron shall not have Dower of the Caput Baronie which was her Lords. They took his Chief Dwelling-house or Seat to be his Caput Baronie. This question was debated in open Court; and no Judgment is here given (r). But in this case, the Counsel argue in a confused manner. They mix or unite opposite ideas. They attribute to Land-baronies the properties of Titular baronies, and to Titular baronies the properties of Land-baronies. They did not duely consider, that the terms Caput Baronie, Head or Capital Seat of a Barony, were not applicable to a Titular Barony, but to a Land-Barony only. When therefore it is said in the Ancient Law, That the Widow of a Baron shall not have Dower out of the Caput Baronie of her late Husband, manifestly That is to be understood onely of Land-Honors or Baronies, and not of Titular Baronies; that is to say, of Baronies by Tenure, which were created by Fefment, and not of Baronies consisting barely in Title.

The

(r) Lady Gerards case, Modern Rep. Part v. p 64, 65, 66.

The Lord Gerards was purely a Titular Barony. And Titular Baronies have no Caput Baronie belonging to them. Wherefore I do humbly apprehend, that in the case just above mentioned, the Counsel disputed and laboured about a Shadow.

VII. An Honor vested in the Crown was in its nature an Escheat, a Barony escheated to the Sovereign. A Manour or Lordship which was part of the original Inheritance of the Crown, was not wont to be called an Honor, nor could properly be so called. For in regard an Honor was a Barony; no Manour or Land that was part of the original Inheritance of the Crown was or could be a Barony.

But a Manour or Lordship which never had been vested in some Earl or Baron was not (for ought that I know) wont to be called an Honor. In truth it could not properly be so called. For an Honor was a Great Barony. But a Manour which was part of the Ancient and Original Inheritance of the Crown could not be called an Honor, because it never was a Barony, or, in the seifine of an Earl or Baron. An Honor vested in the Crown was in truth a Barony escheated.

In old times Escheats and Honors are often joined together, as agreeing in sense and signification.

An Old Roll of the one and thirtieth year of K Henry II, extant in the Exchequer, is entituled Rotulus de Honoribus; and containeth an account of divers Honors and Escheats (s).

Honors and Escheats are joined together in the Great Charter of K John and That of K Henry III; and in other Records (t).

An Honor at one time or other must have been the Fee of an Earl or Baron. Whilst it was vested in an Earl it was called an Honor.

Afterwards whilst it was vested in the Crown by Escheat it was likewise called an Honor.

The same if it was vested in the King by right of Wardship.

An Honor in the Kings hand was an Escheat or Wardship.

When an Honor was in the Kings hand, either by Escheat or Wardship, Wardship, the King by his Prerogative, held it in Dominio, or tanquam in Dominio.

The Sherif of Hanteshire was charged with a Debt of xxs to K Henry II; it was to be required of the Kings Demeane, to wit, of the Honor of Richard de Hay (u).

When a Great Seignury holden of the King in Capite devolved to the Crown by Escheat, it straitway became vested in the King in the same plight, to many purposes, as it was Before vested in the Tenant in Capite; that is to say, if such Seignury was an Honor or Barony.

All the while these Honors rested in the Crown, great care was taken, by the Kings Officers of his Revenue in the ancient times, to distinguish between the Kings primordial Inheritance and these Honors or Escheats.

It was of importance to the Crown, and it was of importance to the Tenants in Chivalry, who held land of these Honors, to have That distinction kept-up. For Example. When the Honor of Gloucester devolved to the Crown by Escheat, John de Torington a Tenant in Chivalry holding of the King as of That Honor, was not bound to Do Personal Service in the Kings Army. If he paid Esuage for the Army, it sufficed. Whereas if he had held of the King ut de Corona, that is, as of the Kings primeval Inheritance, he would have been obliged to do Personal Service in the Kings Army [or in a Castle]; and paying of Esuage would not suffice without the King's express acceptance.

When the Earl of Gloucesters Barony was vested in the King by Escheat, John de Torington became Tenant in Capite to the King. Before, the Earl of Gloucester was his immediate Lord, and he the Earls Tenant in capite or sine medio. As soon as the Earls Barony was united to the Crown, the Earl being sublatus e medio, the King became Johns immediate Lord, and John the King's immediate Tenant, or Tenant in Capite. But Then, the Earls Barony or Honor became, by escheating, united to the Crown in the same plight, to some purposes, in which it was lately vested in the Earl.

And

(u) Idem Vicecomes debet xxs de dimidio hundredo de Fiskenden, quia recep[it] hominem ad Juratam qui non erat de Hundredo; qui remanent fuper Dominium Regis de Hon[ore] Ricardi de Haia. Mag. Rot. 30 Hen. 2. Rot. 6. b. Sudkantesira.

And as to those purposes, the Chevalerian Tenants of the Earl continued Chevalerian Tenants to the King, in the same plight or manner of Holding, as they stood-in to the Earl. For Example.

Whilst the Earl of Gloucester was living, John de Torinton and others, who were Chevalerian Tenants to the Earl, were not answerable, for their Services in the Kings Army, to the King, but to the Earl who was their immediate Lord. The Earl who was immediate Tenant to the King, was answerable to the King for all the Knights Fees pertaining to his Honor; and his Knights, holding those Fees, to him. The Earl was bound to Do Personal Service in the Kings Army, and to Find so many Knights as his Honor was charged with.

If the Earl Fined to the King to be excused Doing Personal Service in the Army, to wit, under the terms, Ne transfretet, pro Passagio, pro licentia remanendi ab exercitu, or the like; his Knights were to help to acquitt him towards the King of that Fine, by paying each-one his afferant part of it to the Earl.

If the Earl paid Escuage to the King, then his Knights were to pay Escuage to Him, each Knight according to the number of his Fees.

Many of the privileges and preeminencies belonging to Baronage were, as it seemeth, founded on the ancient Barony by Tenure.

Peerage.

Peerage was the state or condition of a Peer. It consisted chiefly in That relation which the Barons or Peers of the Kings Court bare to one another. Baronial Tenure or Creation were the Foundation of Peerage. For when a man was either feft in Barony, or was created a Baron or Earl, he was ipso facto a Peer, one of the Pares Curie Regis.

In the Year 1293, Adolph King of the Romans judicially Decreed, That if a Lord of Fees was invaded by his Vassal or Feudatary in a hostile manner, before the Vassal had furrendred his Fee to his Lord, he should stand to the Judgment of his Com-

peers or Convassals concerning such Invasion (w). But I conceive this Decree was but an affirmance of the Feudal law in that point, as it stood in force in Germany and other Countries of Europe, long before the days of Adolph King of the Romans.

Cujacius saith, the Pares Curtis were Convassals, holding Fees of the same Lord. And in That he saith true. He adds, that these Pares Curtis were sometimes styled Pares Curie (x). But I conceive there was no occasion to add Sometimes. Because it looks like making a Distinction where there is no Difference. Curtis signifieth Court, and so doth Curia. The Words bear the same meaning; save that Curtis was a word used most in the Older Feudal ages, and Curia a word used most in the Subsequent Feudal ages. The English nation, and (I think) the French nation too, have been wont to use the word Curia most frequently.

In the Feudal dialect, when we speak of Peers, Curia is always understood, though it be not expressed. For example. By Pares Angliæ we mean Pares Curie Regis Angliæ: and by Pares Franciæ, Pares Curie Regis Franciæ.

Commoners were also Peers to one another. In the Great Charter of K John, it is said, "Let no free man be taken or imprisoned, or disseised, or outlawed, or banished, or any way destroyed, nor will we pass upon him, otherwise than by the lawful judgment of his Peers, or by the law of the Land (y)". In like manner, (w) Nos Adolphus Dei gratia Romanorum rex augustus. Ad universorum notitiam volumus pervenire, quod anno Domini MCCXCIII, tertia post diem annuntiationis B Mariæ Virginis, nobis apud Oppeingheim pro tribunalibus sedentibus, per sententiam est obtentum, quod dominus aliquorum feudorum invasus hostiliter a vassallo vel feudatario, antequam feoda reporter ad manus domini, præfixo die & loco invasori in præsentia comparum & convassallorum suorum stabit contentus sententia quam ii super invasione hujusmodi duxerint proferendam. *Theſaur. manner, the Great Charter of K. Henry III, saith, "No free Man shall be taken and imprisoned, or disseised of his Freehold, or of his Liberties or Free customs, or be outlawed banished or any way destroyed, and that the King will not Pass upon him, unless by the legal judgment of his Peers, or by the law of the Land (z)".

But there was a great Difference between these Commoner-Peers and the Baronial Peers. It was not needful, that the Commoners should be Feudataries of the same Lord, or Peers of the Court of the same Lord; and generally they were not so. Wherefore they were not properly Pares Curtis or Curia. But as Commoners they were deemed persons of the same Rank. And so were Peers rather by way of Resemblance than in reality.

Xenophon in his Institution of a Prince entituled Κυροπαιδεία, relateth, that in Persia in the days of Cyrus, there was an Order of Noblemen called ὁμότιμοι, Homotimoi, Pares or Æquales, Peers. "But several of the Homotimoi (saith he) came-forth, who were never wont to march [into the Field]; and again, These Homotimoi, being few, do easily rule the other Persians though many (a)".

But I would not encourage any man to believe, that Feudal Customs or Manners prevailed either amongst the Persians or the Greeks in the days of Xenophon; or that there was then in either of those Countries, a Rank of Men who might be likened to the Pares Curtis or Curia, known amongst the Feudists.

Likewise, amongst the Romans, towards the declension of That Empire, there was a Superiour rank of men called Patricii.

Mr Selden of Famous memory speaks as if he thought Patricii and Pares were cognate. He joins these Two together, as words of the same or like meaning (b). But in this case Mr Selden seems to

(b) So they do both in France, with us, to speak unadvisedly. The whole Body of the Feudists are against him. His notion is expressly rejected by Cujacius (c).

Sir Robert Cotton, in his Posthuma or Remains, hath a little Tract, entituled, “ That the Kings of England have been pleased “ usually to consult with their Peers in the Great Council, and “ Commons in Parliament, of Marriage Peace and War (d).

Here Sir Robert speaks uncautiously; in calling the Lords the Kings Peers. For Subjects, either Lords or others, cannot be Peers to their Sovereign. It is a repugnancy, to suppose the same person to be a Sovereign, and at the same time an Equal. Of this opinion is Duarenus (e), and others (f).

I speak now of the Peerage of France in its most ancient state, before the Twelve Peers were instituted There. Before That institution, the Peerage of France and That of England seem to have been very like to each other; that is to say, in each of those Two Kingdoms their Peerage was founded in their Baronage, and consisted in the relation they bare to one another as Peers of their Kings Court. In France they called the Peerage Pairie (g).

But in France for many years past, when they speak of Pairie, Peerage, they most commonly mean the Pairie of the said Twelve Peers. The lustre of which Pairie hath eclipsed and obscured the ancient Pairie of the Baronage of France.

us, and elsewhere, well interpret the Persian ἐμώτιμοι, as if you should say companions en honeur. Some, and those of no small note, have thought that the French name of Pairs came out of Patrices or Patricii, which indeed were of like dignitie in the Declining Empire, and first instituted (farre different from those occurring in the elder Roman storie) by Constantine the Great. [Mr Selden addeth much other confused matter. And so he ends this Chapter thus]. But of Peers and Patrices thus much. Seldens Titles of Honor, in quarto, p 350, 351. edit. A D 1614.

In relation to the Twelve Peers of France; there is diversity of opinion concerning the time of their first institution, and other circumstances or questions relating to them. About which, it is not needful for me to enquire. The Discussion of That must be left to the Learned Gentlemen of the Law in the Renowned Kingdom of France; who are best able to discuss and settle this point. In the mean time, the English Reader may, if he pleaseth, consult Messires de Meseray (b), Du Tillet (i), and others, upon this head.

The following properties were incident to an Honor, and inseparable from it.

A Castle was the Caput Baroniæ.

AN Honor had a Capital Seat. That Manor or Seat was called Caput Honoris or Baroniæ. It was commonly a Castle.

Caput Honoris.

IN the Second year of the reign of K John a doubt arose concerning a Knights Fee in Eaton. Elias Croc prayed he might have the Judgment of the Kings Court, Whether his Father Matthew could alien That Fee to his Younger Brother Uncle of Elias, in regard it was a Barony, and the Caput Honoris (k). Not that it was an entire Barony of it self. For one Knights Fee would not amount to a Barony. But that it was a Barony, to wit, a Baronial Fee; not barely a Knights Fee. As if he had said, Inasmuch as the said Fee is Baronial; and not onely so, but even the Capital Seat of the Honor or Barony.

It is to be remembred, that a City or Town could not be the Head of a Barony. When a Town was Part of a Barony, it was only only Part of the Demeanes of the Barony. But if there was a Castle There, the Castle was usually the Head of the Barony. The Castle belonging to the Barony was an Honorary part of the Barony: the Town belonging to the Barony a Plebeian or Inferiour part. The Castle might be compared to the Grand Sale or Hall of the Barony, the Town to a Store-room.

But in regard the Town consisted onely in dominico and not in servitio, it could not by any means be the Caput Baronie. For example. The Town of Richmond in Yorkshire was Part of the Demeane of the Honor of Richmond. But the Castle was the Caput Honoris. No wonder therefore that in the Register of That Honor little or no mention was made of the Town, whilst the Castle was accurately described, and the several Officers, Wards, and Services of the Castle were There particularly set-down. For the Castle was in its nature Baronial and Superiour; but the Town was in its nature Burgensick and Inferiour.

The case was alike in relation to the Castle and Burgh of Wallingford. The Castle not the Burgh was the Caput Honoris.

And so in other cases.

Vid. the Section, where tenere ut de Castro and tenere ut de Honore are Synonymous.

We must not therefore suppose, that the Town of Richmond was the Capital Seat of the Honor of That name (l).

In the Seventh year of K William III, a Gentleman of Distinction in the Common-Law took-up the like groundless notion upon this subject. The Reporter of the Case of the Lady Gerard brings him in saying thus. “Rokeby, Justice. When a Barony was anciently granted, there was a Castle with a Territory “also granted. Suppose there be a Barony of Stafford, and all “the Houses in the Town of Stafford belonged before to the New “Baron, which House shall be called Caput Baronie? (m).

A City or Town therefore might be and often was Part of an Honor or Barony. But Then it was not a Capital but an Inferiour Part of such Barony.

It is evident the Constables, Knights and Sergeants which were in Castles, as well Those belonging to the King as Those belonging to the Barons, did use in Former ages to exercise a great Superiority over the Towns which were near them, and likewise the adjacent Countrey. No wonder Men who were covered with Steel should domineer over Burgeses and Peasants; the Armed over the Unarmed. The former used to make Captures upon the later, of Hay, Corn, Beer, and other things, under divers denominations, to wit, of Prise, Tyne of Castle, Forrage &c.

In and before the reign of K Henry III, the Constable of Dovor-castle and the Men abiding There, were accustomed to make Captures upon the Kentishmen, of Straw, Hay, Vetches, Peas, Beans, Corn, and other things, by the name of Forrage, Furragium. K Henry III, by a Charter under his Great Seal of England, pardoned and released the said Capture called Furragium; and granted to the said Men of Kent, that for the future no such Furrage should be taken of any man (n).

The Prisa cerviciæ Prise of Beer for the use of the Castle of Bristol, was usually worth by the year cs; and was answered to the King as a yearly Due (o).

By Custome these Captures became Familiar, and even Rightful. However, Burgesſes of Towns and other Folks were wont to complain of these Captures; And fought to the King for Protection, and Freedom from them. Accordingly, in Charters made to Townsmen under the Great Seal, the King did sometimes grant to them, amongst other Franchises, that they should be free from Priſe, Tyne of Castle, and such-like captures.

The Townsmen of Bristol paid xxiiij l ix s xd to the Constable of Bristol Castle, in lieu of Priſe of Beer called Tyne, belonging to the Castle, for the Sixteenth year of K Edward I. And the Constable accounted to the King for the same, as part of the profits of the Castle (p).

It appeareth in another place in this Discourse, that the Castle of an Honor is used as an equivalent term for the Honor it self (q); No doubt, because the Castle was deemed the Head or Principal part of the Honor.

And that a Town was deemed a part of the Demeanes of a Barony, may be further made to appear by the following instance.

In the fortyfourth Year of K Edward III, the City of Saresbury was declared to be holden of the King in chief, as Part of the Temporalties of the Bishoprick of Saresbury (r). That is to say, Caput Serjantiæ.

THere was also a Caput Serjantiæ. In the reign of K Edward I, Robert Malenteys held a Serjantie in Waffingle, for which he was to Find for the King Two Foot-foldiers in his Army, for xl days, in Wales, to guard the Kings Little Pavilion, with bows and arrows, and each of those Foot-foldiers was to have for his keeping guard, iiii d a-day of the King. Walter de Waffingle held the caput Serjantiæ, the Head of this Serjanty, which was the Capital Mesuage thereof, with its members and appurtenancies (s).

So also in Manors. A Manor had commonly a Chief Seat belonging to it. Which was called the Manor-house or Capital Mesuage; and sometimes had an appropriated name of Hall, Court, Place &c.

In or about the Tenth Century, Bernard Visconte of Ceritania granted to the Monastery of Cuxano, the Possessions situate within his Viscontie which had come to him from his Ancestours, together with the Forfeitures and Profits belonging thereunto, to wit,

A Fee doth not make a man Noble.

A Rundel was an ancient Honor; and the Castle of That name the Capital Seat of That Honor. Upon this basis it hath been supposed by some men, That if a Commoner should purchase the Honor and Castle of Arundel, he would straitway become Earl of Arundel, without any Creation.

I do make bold to oppose That assertion.

As it is agreed in the Courts of Law, That the King of England is Fons Justitiæ, the Fountain of Justice to his Subjects: So it is also agreed in the Court of Honour and Chivalry, That the King is Fons Honoris, the Fountain of Honour to his Subjects. No man or number of men, without the King, can or ever could make an Earl or Baron. To grant a Baronial Title is an act of Regality, inseparable from the Crown, and incommunicable to Subjects; that is, it was never yet communicated.

In the first place, When Land-Baronies were in being in England, a man could not Purchase and enjoy an Honor or Barony (suppose That of Arundel, or any other) without the Kings consent. There must have been a Royal License made to the Grantor to Grant, and to the Grantee to Purchase or Take such Honor.

In the next place, A man could not become the Kings Man, Homo or Baro Regis, without Doing Homage to the King. If the King was not pleased to accept his Homage, he could not Purchase or Hold an Honor.

Thirdly, a man could not have seifine of an Honor, without having it from the Kings hand. Every Honor originally passed from the King. And upon every Change, by Death or otherwise, returned to the King again, and remained in his hand untill he commanded commanded feifin of it to be delivered to his Homager, according to the Law or Custom of Noble Fiefs.

Fourthly, There never was (for ought that I know), an instance of any mans coming into feifin of an Honor, by Purchase or Contract made with a Subject.

This is another instance of the mischief of confounding Land-Honors with Titular Honors.

If a man hath a Noble Fief vested in him, That is a good Basis to build Nobility on.

The Lands of some men were Knightly; that is, holden by Knight-service; which was a splendid and honourable Tenure. And any man that Held Land by Knight-service, vested in him by Descent or heritage, was deemed to be of Gentlemanly condition or degree.

Duarenus saith, “ All the Feudists assert, that a Fief or Fee “ which hath in it self dignity [or nobility] maketh the possessor “ Noble. This, saith he, I think is not true; unless the Fief be “ received from the King. For how can a Baron or Earl, in giving a Fief, make a man noble; seeing it is not in the power “ of him, but of the King alone, to make a man noble (u).

But probably Duarenus and the other Feudists may be reconciled.

If by the word nobilitat is onely meant being made a Gentleman, then they are all agreed. In England, in case a Peasant acquired Land holden by Knight-service, he was thereby placed in the estate or rank of a Gentleman. But by acquiring a Barony, a man did not straitway become a Baron, nor by acquiring a Knights Fee, a Knight. For nobody could conferr Titles of Honour besides the King, or persons having power and authority from him.

Every Honor had three constituents, to wit, Seniuragium, Servitium, and Dominicum, Seigneurage, Service, and Demeane.

CHAPTER II.

And-Honors and Baronies were originally created or erected by Fefment. The First Erection of them in England may properly be referred to the reign of K William I.

K William I., to reward his Norman Barons, and to engage them to himself by an inviolable Faith, enfeoffed them of Great Dominions or Lordships in England, To hold by the Service of So many Knights. The number of the Knights [or Knights Fees] was fixed and declared by the King at the time of such Fefment.

K William I. being seized of the whole Kingdom of England in Demeane, retained a great part of it in his own Seifine; and other part thereof he granted and transferred to others, in the manner which I fhall here fet-down. The faid K William I. found the Archbishops and Bishops, and several of the Abbots and Priours of England possessed of divers Lands and Rents. He commanded them to make proof that their possession was Rightful. This Proof was called Dirationare, to Dirationate, or Deraigne.

Lanfrank Archbishop of Canterbury had a Long Plea or Tryal of this nature at Pinnenden; wherein he dirationated the Lands and Possessions belonging to his See. The Tryal lasted three days. An account is given of it at large in Anglia Sacra (w). In like manner Gundulf Bishop of Rocheſter evindicated the lands and possessions of his See (x); and other Ecclesiastical persons did the like. When the Clergy had made-out their Right to their Lands and tenements, the King continued them in peaceable Possession: But charged their Lands with Military Service; that is to say, He enfeoffed them, To hold of Him and his heirs, by the Service of So many Knights, to wit, in proportion to the Quantity and Value of their Lands and Tenements.

Moreover,

tannicæ.

Moreover, K William I gave other part, and That a very considerable one, of the Manours and Lands of England, to the Norman and French Lords and Knights who accompanied him, and were Partners of his Fortune; that is to say, He enfeoffed them of Large Possessions, To hold of Him and his heirs, to Them and their heirs, by Homage and Service. For example. He enfeoffed the Earl of Bretagne of the Lands of Earl Edwyn in the North-part of England, and of divers Lands in other Counties, To hold to him the Earl of Bretagne and his heirs, of the King and his heirs, in Barony, to wit, by the Service of So many Knights as the King limited or declared. All these Lands, together with the Capital Seat of the Earl of Bretagne in England, which was, I think, the Castle at Richemund in Yorkshire, were called the Honor of Britanny, the Honor of the Earl of Britanny [in England], the Honor of Richemund, or the like. In the reign of K Henry II, the Honor of the Earl of Britanny in England was charged with the Service of Knights Fees of the Old Feoffment, by the testimony of the Earls Steward (y).

He feft the Earl of Moreton a Norman Lord, of several Lands and Lordships, to hold to him and his heirs, of the King and his heirs, by Barony, by the Service of so many Knights as the King appointed.

He feft Hugh de Grentemeisnill a Norman Lord, of divers Lands and feigneuries, to hold to him and his heirs, of the King and his heirs, in Barony, by the Service of a certain number of Knights limited by the King.

We cannot at this day fet-forth precisely the manner in which K William I enfeffed his Barons of their Baronies, or his Knights of their Knights Fees. It is certain that he did enfeff several Barons. He feffed Alan Earl of Bretaigne of the Great Fee of Richmond, which hath been ever-since called the Honour of Richmond.

K William I granted a great part of the Lands of England to his Norman Lords and Knights. It is found by an undoubted Record, to wit by Domesday-book, that in the life-time of K William I, namely in the year 1086, the Norman Lords and Knights were

were in actual seifine of the faid Lands. Doctor Robert Brady hath tranfcribed and printed the names of the Great Landholders of England from Domesday Book (z); and in Him the Reader may find them. When therefore K William I granted the Lands of England to the Normans or others, no man can yell doubt but that he granted the fame for their Homage and Service.

This was indeed a great Work for one King to accomplifh. For it was an impofing a New Law and Conftitution upon the Kingdom, quite different from That of the Anglofaxons or Englifh-men. But that K William I Did this, the Coeval and other Ancient Hiftorians bear witnefs.

Let this then be the Hypothefis. K William I begun this method of granting the Lands of England by Fefment, to be holden of Him and his heirs, in Baronage, in Knight-fervice, or in Serjanty &c. Peradventure K William I did not in his life-time grant all the Lands in England to his Homagers in this way of Fefing. He begunn it. His Two Sons William II, and Henry I finifht it; that is, fupplied the fmall refidue.

I think, there were not any Honours created de novo by Feofment in the reign of K Henry III, or perhaps of K John.

I fay the main part of this great Work was accomplifhed by K William I.

If I have obferved right, this was the Beginning of the Feudal Syfteme in England.

K William I brought the Transmarine Laws of Neuftria or Normandy into England, and eftablifhed them There; as Richard Fitz-Niel Bifhop of London and Treasurer of England affirmeth, in the ancient Dialogue concerning the Exchequer (a).

It is likely the Feudal Scheme of which I have been speaking, made a great part of those Innovations and Alterations in the Old Laws and Customs of England.

This was the Turn which the Feudal System of Laws introduced by K William I gave to the Ancient Laws and Customs of England.

This great alteration in the Law of England caused great murmurings and complaints throughout the Kingdom. This caused all ranks of men, Clergy, Baronage and Commoners, to cry aloud that the Laws of K Edward the Confessor, that is, the old Anglo-saxon or English Laws (which were not Feudal) might be restored.

But their Complaints did not avail. The Conquerour and his next Successors, especially K Henry II, established the Laws of Normandy in England, so effectually, that after the reign of K Henry II, the English were quiet and well at ease in this particular.

K Henry I did also feff several Barons in divers Baronies, and several Knights in Knights Fees.

An Ancient Fefment had been made of the Honor of Blythe. In the reign of K Henry I, that Honor was in the Kings hand either by Escheat or Wardship. For the profits of it were accounted-for to that King (b).

K Henry I in the Tenth Year of his reign erected the Bishoprick of Ely; that is, he changed the Abbey of Ely into a Bishoprick. This he did with the approbation of Calixtus II then Pope of Rome, and of several Wise men of his own Realm, Prelates Earls and Barons. The Charter of K Henry I for erecting the Bishoprick of Ely is set down in Anglia Sacra (c).

By the Charter of Erection it doth not appear what Services of the Shield, or indeed that any, were Then imposed upon the Lands of the Bishoprick. But it is next to a certainty, that some such Services were imposed by That King at some time or other.

For in the — year of K Henry II we find, that the Bishop of Ely Bishop of Elys Knights 1 cr 2 H 2. stood charged to the Crown for Knights Fees.

K Henry I feft William Archard of certain land, To hold by the Service of one Knights Fee (d). And no doubt he feft feveral other perfons in Knight-service.

All Fefments which had been made either to Barons or Knights before the day of the Death of K Henry I, were called Vetus feffamentum, The Old Fefment, untill the time of the Death of K Henry I.

In like manner, K Henry II granted to his Great-men divers Lands and Seigneuries, to be holden of Him and his heirs to them and their heirs, either in Barony or by bare Chivalerian Homage and Service, as he thought fit.

Hence it came to pafs, that Fefments made after the Death of K Henry I, or in the reign of K Henry II, were ftyled New Fefment.

K Henry II, when he had conquered Ireland, took the fame method of Fefing, or erecting of Baronies and Knights Fees There. For example. He feft Hugh de Lafci of the Kingdom or County of Meath, To hold by the Service of one hundred Knights (e); Robert Fitz-stephen and Miles de Cogham, of the Kingdom of Cork, by the Service of Sixty Knights (f); Herbert Fitz-herbert and others of the Kingdom of Limerich, by Sixty Knights (g). And foon afterwards, he granted the whole Kingdom of Limerich to Philip de Bransa [the Hiftorian fhould have faid, to Philip de de Breaufa, or rather de Braiofa], to hold by the Service of Sixty Knights (h). After this Fefment, the Kingdom of Limerich became an Honor in the Family of Braiofa; and is ftyled an Honor, in the Great Roll of the Exchequer in the reign of K John (i). He alfo granted-out Knights Fees, to wit, the Servitium de Wefefordia, the Servitium Raimundi de Druna, and other Services or Knights Fees (k). For before the reign of K Henry II, if I have obferved right, the Feudal Customs were not known in Ireland.

The King imposed the Service.

WHen the King feft a man of Land, He declared and imposed the Service, by which it was to be holden (q).

When the King imposed Service upon Land, he usually imposed it in proportion to the Value of the Land. (r)

The K imposed the Service, and changed it.

AS it was in the Kings Power to impose and limit the Service to be done to Him by his Feudatary or Tenant in chief: So it was in His power to alter the Service, for reasons to him seeming meet.

K Richard I feft Adam de la More of the Land of Horton, to be holden by Knight-service. Afterwards K John commanded, that Adam should hold the said Land by the Service of the Falconrie. And Geofrey Fitz Pierre the High Justicier testified and ordered by his Writ, that the Kings command in this case should be enrolled at the Exchequer (s).

Honors in Normandy.

IT is to be remembred, that in Old times the Great Lords in Normandy were usually styled Barons. There were indeed Earls in that Countrey. At the same time, the Sovereign of Normandy himself was then commonly styled (at least in England) only Comes, Earl. In like manner, for a great while after the Norman Conquest there was but one Title amongst the Subjects of the Kingdom of England, namely That of Earl, superiour to the title of Baron; but all the Great Lords of England, to wit, both Earls and Barons, were called Barons, and their Order Baronage.

In old times, before the reign of Philip Augustus, there was a conformity between the Baronage of France and the Baronage of England, in several particulars.

All the Nobility or Peers of France, Dukes, Marquises, Earls and others were comprehended under the word Barons; they held their principal seigneuries immediately of the Crown (z); they used to assist in the Judgments given in the Kings supreme Court; that is, to serve and judge therein; they assisted and served at the Coronation of the King; and counselled him in the affairs which he pleased to communicate to them (a).

The High Officers of the Palace in France were of the nature of Feudal Honors. The Office of Hereditary Seneschal was deemed equipollent to a Comté, a County or Earldom as Jean du Tillet writeth (b).

The term Honor was used in the same sense in France as in England. If I do not mistake, it is of French original.

Some Lawyers in France have thought, that Honors were as ancient as the First Race of their Kings (c). But I apprehend they make them somewhat more ancient than is meet. I would chuse to refer the origin of them to the End of the Second Race, or if they please, to the Beginning of the Third.

The Sieur de Mezeray (of Worthy memory), under the year of Christ MC, saith that the Estates of the Lords of France, which they held of the King, were then called Honors (d).

CHAPTER III.

A Barony was not to be divided.

IN ordinary course a Barony was not to be ^{A Barony was an Entire Estate} divided into Parts. It was in its nature a Feudum integrum; and was ab origine designed to be kept Entire. Accordingly, by Law it was appointed to descend Entire from heir to heir.

When a Barony descended Entire, the Baron or Tenant was said to Hold the Baronial Lands of the King in chief by the Service of one entire Barony; naming it by its Usual or Known name. This is exemplified in the cases following.

In the Five and thirtieth year of K. Edward I, William de Breouse paid C marks Relief, for the Castle or Barony of Brembre, which he held of the King in chief (l).

In Trinity-term in the twentieth year of K. Edward III, it was found in the Rolls of the Kings Exchequer, that Henry Lescrop Chivaler held the Manor of Whalton in Northumberland with the Barony, of the King in chief, by the Service of Three Knights Fees (m). Here by Manerium cum baronia, we may understand, that Henrici Lescrop Chivaler defuncti, attachiatus fuit essendi hic ad plures dies præteritos, & tandem in crastino S Michaelis hoc termino, ad respondendum Regi de relevio suo, de omnibus terris & tenementis quæ prædictus Henricus pater suus tenuit de Rege in Capite die quo obiit, in Comitatu Eboraci & in aliis Comitatibus Angliæ, & pro quibus prædictus Stephanus fecit Domino Regi nunc homagium & fidelitatem, xxi^o die Septembris anno regni sui xvi^o, sicut continetur in Originali de eodem anno, Rotulo xxix^o.

Et ad prædictum crastinum S Michaelis prædictus Stephanus venit hic per Thomam Bank attornatum suum: Et cognovit se tenere, & dictum Henricum patrem suum tenuisse, de Domino Rege in Capite die quo obiit, Manerium de Drisfeld cum membris & suis pertinentiis in Comitatu Eboraci, per fidelitatem tantum pro omni servicio, Manerium de Faxflete cum membris & suis pertinentiis in eodem Comitatu per fidelitatem tantum pro omni servitio, unum Mesuagium cum omnibus suis pertinentiis quod vocatur Dalton Lathes in eodem Comitatu, per servitium unius denarii per annum pro omni servicio, Manerium de Bondon & Hareburgh cum pertinentiis, una cum c^s redditus in Holewel & Appetilby in Comitatu Leycestriæ, per servitium duodecimæ partis unius feodi Militis, Manerium de Fryshyde cum membris & suis pertinentiis in Comitatu Essexiæ, de Domino Rege ut de Honore Bononiæ, per servitium unius feodi Militis, Manerium de Bernoltby cum omnibus membris & pertinentiis suis in Comitatu Lincolnæ, de Domino Rege in Capite in Socagio, per fidelitatem tantum pro omni servicio, & Manerium de Whalton & Newham cum pertinentiis in Comitatu Northumbriæ, per servitium trium feodorum Militum; juxta quæ quidem servicia idem Stephanus offert Regi relevium, pro terris & tenementis prædictis —. Et super hoc idem Stephanus dat Domino Regi xxl viii s v d de relevio suo, pro maner[iis] terris & tenementis prædictis, juxta servicia per ipsum superius recognita. Et unde scrutatis rotulis pro rege, compertum est in Memorandis de anno xx^o Regis E tertii, videlicet avi Domini Regis nunc, inter Fines de termino S Trinitatis, Rotulo primo, quod prædictus Henricus Lescrop oneratus fuit de xv l de relevio suo, pro prædicto Manerio de Whalton cum pertinentiis, quod quidem Manerium cum baronia & aliis pertinentiis suis tenetur de Rege in Capite, per servitium trium feodorum Militum tantum, per Cartam Regis; sicut continetur ibidem, & prout prædictus

In the Third year of K Henry VII, Rafe Earl of Westmerland held the Manor of Cotyngham of the King in chief, by the Service of one Barony (p).

A Castle or Head of a Barony could not be divided even by Act in Law.

The like Law and Usage took place in the Kingdom of Naples. In that Kingdom a man was not permitted to assign Dower of a Castle which was the Head or principal part of a Barony or Earldom (q). This was conformable to the Feudal Law.

And yet a Barony did many times happen to be divided; namely into Moieties, Thirds, or other Parts. Such division was not used to be made by Feffment or other Act of the Baron; but by act in Law; most usually by Descent inter Fœminas.

After a Barony was divided, haply it continued so divided for many years; and perchance never became entire again.

When a Barony descended to Heireffes, it was to be equally divided between them. The Part of each Heirefs, before Partition made, was called her Rationabilis Pars of such a Barony. It was also called Propars a Purpart.

Nevertheless, the Eldest Daughter of a Baron had a Preference in this respect, That the Chief Seat of the Barony was by Law to be allotted to her. This Preference was given her by reason of her Eldership.

The

The Eldership in this case was in Former times called eifnecia, efnecia. The word is originally French, viz. Aînée, eîsnée, Eldest. This Romanick word is made out of the French word.

When three or more Daughters and heireffes of a Baron, the Eldest Daughter was usually called filia primogenita (and sometimes eimetia), the Second Daughter Secunda filia, the Third Tertia filia, and the Youngest Daughter postnata filia. Here the word postnata is a homely Romanick word, made out of the French word puîsnée, Youngest (r).

Some Older Rolls are here referred to, which confirm, in the main, Ralfs allegation. Trin. Fines 17 Hen. 6. Rot. 2.

A great reason for keeping up the Distinction of the Parts of Baronies, was to ascertain and secure the Kings Reliefs. For when a Barony was divided into Parts; suppose into Four Parts; then, each person answering to the King for his assierant Part, the King would be answered the whole. Whereas if this distinction had not been kept-up, the King might some time or other have lost one or more assierant part or parts, for want of knowing where or of whom to demand the same.

Thus Land-Baronies were divided and subdivided, till at length they were brought to nought.

Manors severed from the Honor of Gloucester.

Sometimes Manors or Lands were granted-away, and by that means severed from an Honor to which they belonged.

John Earl of Moreton, afterwards King of England, by his Charter, granted the Land or Manor of Bristelton, belonging to the Honor of Gloucester, to John La Warre, to be holden by John La Warre and his heirs, of Earl John and his heirs, by the Service of half a Knight (p).

Henry III, towards the latter end of his reign granted several Manors in the Counties of Southampton and Kent, belonging to the Honor of Gloucester, to the then Countess of Gloucester and her Son Gilbert de Clare (q).

In the twenty-eighth year of K Henry II, xxxvi for one half year, were allowed, in the Terræ datæ of the Honour of Wallingford, TENURE by Barony was of the same nature in general with Tenure by Chivalry.

An Honor was under the like law and rule with a Knights Fee in several particulars; namely, in Tenure, in Homage and Fealty, in Service, in Relief, in Wardship, in Marriage, and the rest.

Till an Heir attained to the age of one and twenty years, which was deemed his Full Age, he was to be in Wardship of his Lord: And Barons in the Kings Wardship.

When the Heir holding in Barony or Chivalry was of Full Age (and not before), he was, by the Custom of England, to be made a Knight.

By the Custom of England, an Heir could not actually Hold a Barony or Knights Fee, untill he was of the Age of One and twenty years. This is verified in the case of the Heirs of Robert de Furnell (s).

For these reasons, a Baron when he came to mature Age, was often Honor de Knaresburgh in Fee tail.

K Henry III granted the Manor of Knaresburgh with the Castle and Honor, and the Knights Fees and all other appurtenances, to Hubert de Burgh and Margaret his wife, and to the heirs descending from the said Hubert and Margaret; To hold of the King and his heirs, during the Life of each of them, and after their decease, to their heirs descending from them the said Hubert and Margaret, in Fee and Inheritance; Rendring for the same to the King and his heirs yearly at his Exchequer, c*l*, payable at the two Terms, for all Services and demands (i).

So also an Honor might be lett to ferm, or put into Custody, like as a Manour or other estate in land. In the Fortyfourth year of K Henry III, in a Plea moved in the Court of Exchequer between John de Luvetot Keeper of the Honour of Peverell of Notingham then in the Kings hands, and Simon de Asselahton Sherif of the Counties of Notingham and Derby, Search was made in the Rolls of the Exchequer. By those Rolls it was attainted (that is manifestly proved) that Roger de Luvetot Keeper of that Honor did answer to the King upon his Account rendred in the Fortieth year of That King, for the profits of View of Frankpledg, as pertaining to his Ferme of that Honor. Thereupon the Barons gave Judgment for the said John de Luvetot (u).

The Bishop of Norwich was feoffed, to hold of the King and his heirs, by the Service of Forty Knights, or more. In the reign of K Henry II, the Bishop acknowledged the Service of Forty Knights, and Disowned all the rest (s).

The Abbot of S Edmund in Suffolk was feoffed in like manner. He also owned the Service of Forty Knights, and disowned the rest which he was charged with (t).

The Abbot of Tavistok was feft, to hold of the King and his heirs, by the Service of so many Knights. In the reign of K Henry I, it became doubtful by the Service of how many Knights the Abbot held. Whereupon K Henry I released to the Abbot all above Fifteen Knights Fees (u).

In the Twenty-sixth year of K Edward I, Escuage for five Knights Fees was demanded of Richard Bishop of Hereford. It was found by Inquisition, that Thomas Bishop of Hereford the next predecessor, Did his Service for Five Knights Fees, in the Kings Army of Wales, to wit, by Two Knights for Two of the Five Knights Fees, and by six Esquires for the other Three Knights Fees, by each Knight and Esquire with a Covered horse. So the King commanded, that Bishop Richard be acquitted of the said Demand of Escuage (w).

The K had great Power over Knights Fees and Baronies.

IN ancient times, the Kings of England had a great Power over Baronial and Military Fees.

In the reign of K Henry II, in the Army sent against Wales, Henry de Essex was the King's Standard-bearer. Through Cowardise he let the King's Standard fall to the ground. This was an act contrary to the laws of Chivalry, Dishonourable to the King, and an encouragement to the Enemy. For this cause the

The Words just above cited are written in a hand of the reign of K Henry II, upon a spare-leaf viz. fol. 11 b, in a Manuscript Gospel. This Gospel is in Velum, in octavo-fize, and is Written in a hand of the reign of K Henry II, as I judg by the character. I call it a Gospel; tho' it containeth not the whole Four Gospels, but Portions taken out of them. The Book is written in a fair strong hand. On the out side of the Cover at the beginning of the Book an ancient Crucifix of brass is fastned by iron nails or pins. The Covers of the Book are Wood. In July 1723 this Gospel was in the possession of Mr Thomas Martin of Thetford in Norfolk.

The same K Henry II gave seifine to Ralf de Mandevill of the Barony of Merfwude, because he was a better Knight than his Elder Brother Robert de Mandevill (f).

In the reign of K John, Robert de London was disseised of his Rent in Bacscete, for concealing his Service [which he owed to the King] (g).

The Kings Power over Baronies.

K Edward I. seized into his own hand the Barony of the Abbot of Shrewsbury, for a Contempt done to the King. Afterwards for a Fine of fifty marks, the King pardoned and remitted to the Abbot the Wrath and Indignation which he had conceived against the Abbot, and ordered his Barony to be restored. Whereupon, by a Close-writ of the Great Seal, the King commanded the Sheriff of Shropshire, to give the Abbot seifine or restitution of his said Barony, with all the issues thereof from the time of seizing the same into the King's hand (h).

In the seventh year of K Richard I, Walter de Niewentons land was feized into the King's hand upon default of paying Relief (k).

And Malger le Vavasur was disseised of his Land, for not going with the King into Ireland, to do Service in the Army there (l).

The King's Subjects likewise used to distrain for arreres of Service (m).

The King often found occasions to seise mens Lands and Tenements into his own hand; namely for Contempts, and Trespasses of divers kinds.

K Edward I, in or about the Seventh year of his reign, sent for Nicolas de Wesson, to come to him about certain business concerning which the King desired to speak with him. Nicolas did not think fit to come; but defaulted; as one that would make no return to the Kings Writ directed to him. Afterwards, Nicolas was found in the King's Court, and examined touching the said Contempt which he had done to the King. Nicolas well knowing he could not prove himself innocent of the said Trespass, submitted himself to the King's Will. Whereupon the King prefixed him a Day to appear at the Parliament to be holden in the Quinzime of Easter then next, to hear the Kings Will. Nicolas came at the Day; and by reason of certain arduous business, the King could not then find leisure to declare his Will; but adjourned him from that Parliament, to the Parliament to be holden three weeks after Michaelmas then next. At that Day Nicolas did not think fit to attend; adding one Contempt to another. Hereupon, the King by a close Writ under his Great Seal, commanded

From hence sprung Writs of Actions or Intrusion (o).

In or about the eight and twentieth year of K Edward III, Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Essex and Hereford sued Thomas de la Ryvere Sherif of Wilshire in the Exchequer, for that he the said Thomas attached the Earl at his Manor of Sutbewyk, to appear at the Assises at New Saresbiry, to answer unto William de Stafford and Alice his wife, in an Assise of Novel Disseifine of the said Manour, and that the said Thomas gave Jurours a View of the Manour, and seifed it into the Kings hand with the goods and chatells found in the said Manour. Whereupon the Earl appeared at New Saresbiry, with his Servants and others of his Counsel, being ready to answer for the said Disseifine. And that the said Thomas did not return any Writ at the said Assises, and said that he had received no Writ touching the premisses. The Defendant Thomas came and pleaded, that he did not attach the said Earl, nor seife the said Manour into the Kings hand, nor gave any Jurours View of the Manour, nor had any Writ or Warrant to do the premisses. Issue is joined thereon. Tryal is had. The Jurours brought in a Verdict for the Earl in all points; and gave him for Damages c marks. Thomas de la Ryvere is arrested by the Sherifs of London for this Trespass, and by the Court is committed to the Fleet-prison. The Earl gave the Clerks of the Office of Pleas lxs of the said Damages; Which was paid to

Humfridus de Bohun Comes Essex[iæ] & Herefordiæ venit coram Baronibus, per Johannem de Longesdon Attornatum suum, vº die Octobris hoc anno, & queritur per Billam de Thoma de la Ryvere Vicecomitem Wyltes[iæ], præsentem in Curia eodem die, de eo videlicet quod cum idem Thomas colore officii sui, die Jovis proximo post festum Purificationis beatæ Mariæ Virginis anno xxvº & nunc, attachiavit præfatum Comitem apud Manerium suum de Suthewyk, effendi apud Novam Saresburiam, die Lunæ proximo post festum Sancti Mathiæ Apostoli tunc proximo sequens, coram Willelmo de Sharethull & Sociis suis Justiciariis Regis ad Assisas in Comitatu prædicto capiendas assign[at]is, ad respondendum Humfrido filio Johannis de Stafford & Aliciæ uxori ejus, in una assisa novæ disseisinæ de Manerio prædicto, de quo fecit Juratores visum habere, & illud in manum Regis seifivit, unacum bonis & catallis inibi inventis; quo prætextu idem Comes venit apud Novam Saresburiam, cum servantibus & pluribus aliis de Consilio suo, super disseisinam prædictam responsur[us], prædictus Thomas aliquod breve inde coram præfatis Justiciariis non retornavit, nec retornare voluit, sed dixit se nullum breve inde habuisse, in contemptum Regis, ac dampnum ipsius Comitis cc*l*. Et hoc offert &c.

Et prædictus Thomas defendit dampnum & quicquid &c. Et dicit quod ipse præfatum Comitem non attachiavit, nec dictum Manerium suum in manum Regis seifivit, neque Juratores visum de Manerio prædicto habere fecit, nec aliquod breve seu warrantum ad præmissa facienda habuit, prout ei imponitur. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam; Et prædictus Comes similiter. Ideo fiat inde Jurata. Et præceptum est Coronatoribus quod venire faciant hic a die Sancti Martini in xv dies xii &c. de visneto Manerii de Suthewyk, quorum quilibet &c. per quos &c. qui nec &c. ad recognoscendum &c. CHAPTER

CHAPTER VI.

WHEN the King for the time being charged his Barons or Knights with Service or Prestation, he constantly dealt with them according to Justice and Honour. On the other side, the Barons and Knights did sometimes deal flyly and unfairly with the King. They took advantage of the ignorance or negligence of his Officers, to defraud or deceive him.

In the ninth year of K Henry III, it was found by an Inquisition, that Walter de Clifford held of the King in chief by the Service of one Knight, and not by Barony (w).

Abbots non tenentes per Baroniam, ut dixerunt.

IN the tenth year of K Edward I an Escuage ran for the Kings Army of Wales. The Abbot of St Austlin of Canterbury was charged with Escuage-money for that Army, at xls per scutum (or per Knights Fee), for fifteen Knights Fees. In the sixteenth year of Edward II, the Abbot came by his Attorney, and pleaded, That he (the Abbot) ought not to be charged either with the said Service of fifteen Knights, or with Escuage-money for that Service, in regard the said Abbot and his Predecessours, time out of mind, held all their lands and tenements, as well those holden in Demeane as those holden in Service, of the King and his Ancestours Kings of England, by the Service of one Knight only, and not of fifteen Knights; and that the King and his Ancestours time out of mind were not at any time seised of more or other Service, from the Abbot or his Predecessours, for their said lands and tenements, than of the Service of one Knight only. And that the Abbot of St Austlin, in the said tenth year of K Edward I, did his Service for one Knights Fee in the Kings Army of Wales; for proof whereof, he voucheth the Rolls of the Mareschalsy for that that Army. He also produceth a Close-writ of the Great Seal, whereby the King ordereth the Treasurer and Barons of his Exchequer, to do Right to the Abbot upon his Case (x).

Alexander de Swereford saith, that the Abbot of St Austlin held fifteen Knights Fees (y).

The Abbot of St Austlin had great success in defrauding the King of his Services. The Abbot, it seems, had been feoffed to hold by the Service of fifteen Knights. Of those fifteen, he found means to conceal Twelve; and answered to the King for three only. In the fourth year of K Edward I, a General Muster of the Kings Army that was to march against Scotland was made at Twedemuth. There, the Barons Knights and Tenants by Warlike Sergeanties made their Profrum Servitiorum, their Proser of Services, before the Deputy-Constable and the Mareſhall of the Kings Kings Army. Amongst others the Abbot of St Austin profered his Service by three Knights; and it was accepted.

In the year of K Edward I, the Abbot of St Austin paid Escauage to the King for three Knights Fees, for the Army that was to act against the Scots. And at length in the aforesaid sixteenth year of K Edward II, the Abbot of St Austin had confidence enough to plead in the Court of Exchequer, that he held all his Lands by the Service of one Knight.

There was another Device practised both by the Clergy and Laity to wrong the King of his Services and Dues. It was this. When the Summonces ad habendum servitium had been issued, several of the Barons and Knights would appear before the Constable and Marshall of the King's Host, and would Profer one Half, a third, or may-be a Smaller Part of their due Service. The Constable and Marshall, for want of better information, oftentimes admitted those unfair Profers; being probably in haste to complete their Army, and to march against the enemy. And when those fallacious Profers had been repeated, they served to make precedents against the King; insomuch that the Baron would afterwards come into one of the Kings Courts, and allege that that his due Service was but so much, and that he did that Service in such an Army, and again in such an Army, as appeared by the Rolls of the Mareschalsey of the King's Armies, or by Certificate from the Constable or Mareschall of those Armies. And so the Baron was usually acquitted against the King even at the Exchequer, for all Service besides that which he had profered and performed in the King's Armies. For example. At the General Muster of the King's Army at Twedemuth in the fourth year of K Edward I, the Earl of Cornwall profered his Service for his whole Barony to be done by three Knights. Which Profer was accepted. As if the Earl of Cornwalls Barony consisted of no more than three Knights Fees.

By these means (several others causes not here mentioned concurring), in process of time it became very Doubtful, for what number of Knights Fees each Baron and Tenant in Chivalry was answerable. When the King summoned his Barons and Knights, straightway a doubt arose about the Quantity of their Service. Where the Kings Officers charged twenty Knights Fees, perhaps the Baron so charged admitted of no more than three or five Knights Fees. In like manner, in relation to Aids and Escuages. If the King's Officers demanded Escuage for forty Knights Fees, perhaps the Baron of whom it was demanded, pretended to pay Escuage for no more than five or ten. When Things were brought to this State, the Kings of England lost a great Part of the Service of the Shield, which was due from their Barons and Knights. This proved to be a matter of no light consequence. It produced a great Alteration in the Kingdom of England. For then, the Kings of England could no longer assess and levy their Aids and Escuages in the old Seignourial way, namely in the method which had been used in the reigns of K Henry II, K Richard I, and K John. Thenceforth they could do nothing of this nature effectually, but by Common Counsel and Consent. They found it necessary to call their Barons, Prelates, Tenants in capite, and others, to a Treaty or Parley, in order to settle and adjust all Payments by Common Accord: It being a known Maxime, That Consent taketh away Errour. This seemed to be the case. About that time, it became a general opinion amongst men, that if they consented they were answerable, if they did not consent, they were were not answerable, for the Prestation or Payment charged on them.

In the first year of K Edward II, Walter de Stapledon Bishop elect of Exeter, one of the Executours of Thomas Button or Bitton late Bishop there, complained to the King in his Council, that whereas the said Deceased died before the time, when the Earls Barons and Communities of Counties of England granted to the King for his Subsidy a twentieth of their moveable goods, and the Citizens and Burgeses of England, and the Tenants of the ancient Demeane of the Crown a fifteenth of their moveable goods, and that the Deceased was never in his life-time requested to grant the King the said Subsidy, nor gave his consent to the Grant thereof; That nevertheless the Taxours and Collectours of the said twentieth and fifteenth in the County of Devon, taxed the goods and chatels which the said Deceased had on the Day of his death in that County to the said twentieth or fifteenth, and went about to levy the same, unjustly. The King being willing to have Justice done in the case, did by a Writ issuing out of his Exchequer, command the said Taxours and Collectours, that as to the goods and chattells whereof the Deceased was solely possessed on the day of his Death, and constantly afterwards untill after the time when the said Subsidy was granted to the King, they should wholly forbear to levy the said Subsidy on those Goods and Chattells untill the Fortnight after Easter then next, that then either in Parliament or where else the King should think fit to appoint, it might be finally discussed what was rightfully to be done in the Case (g). Several others used the like Allegation mutatis mutandis, Doubts about Knights Fees.

IN proceſs of time divers questions or doubts aroſe concerning Fees.

Sometimes it was doubted, whether a Fee was holden by Barony, or only by Knight-service not embaronied.

Sometimes it was doubted, whether a Fee was holden by a whole Barony, or by part of a Barony.

Sometimes it was doubted, by the Service of how many Knights a Barony or Great Seigneury was holden.

Doubts about the number of Knights Fees.

THE Biſhop of Durham was charged with ſeventy Knights Fees, for the Aid to marry K. Henry the Seconds Daughter Maud, to the Duke of Saxony. The Biſhop acknowledged ten Knights Fees; and diſowned the other fixty (l).

In the eighteenth year of K. Henry II, it appeareth by the Great Roll of the Exchequer, that they could not then diſcover the number of the Knights Fees of the Honor of Conan Earl of Bretagne and Richmund (m). And in the firſt year of K. John, the the Court of Exchequer took the affirmation of the Countess of Richemunds Steward (for want of more certain evidence), concerning the number of the feoffed Knights of that Honor. The Great Roll of the Exchequer expresseth it so; to wit, The Honor of Bretagne in England consisted of cxi Knights Fees, as Thomas de Burc Steward of that Honor affirmed (n).

In the fifteenth year of K John, several Fees belonging to the Honor of Gloucester; about twenty in number, could not be found (o). In fine. The number of the Knights Fees of the Barons and other Great men, was so uncertain, that in the reign of K Henry II, it was thought proper to command the Barons and Tenants in capite, to certify the King under their Seals, concerning the number of their Knights Fees, of the Old Feofment and of the New: Which Certificates were accordingly made; and were then called Cartæ Baronum. Mention is made of them in the History of the Exchequer.

The Books of Knights Fees.

IN process of time, by means of subdividing of Knights-Fees, and by other causes, great and perplexing doubts arose. So that even the Barons of the Exchequer, who were expert in these things, were often at a loss how to act. It was found troublesome to search upon frequent occasions in the Annual Rolls and other Records of the Exchequer at large. Wherefore, to make the trouble of searching the more easy, the Barons and the King's Council ordered extracts to be made out of the Rolls of the Exchequer, and to be digested in an orderly manner in Books. Those Books were called the Books of Knights fees. Which were not indeed Records properly speaking; yet they served for a Direction or Rule to go-by in determining the doubts which did from time to time arise (p).

Alexander de Swereford, of his own accord as it seemeth, began this method, when he compiled the Red-Book, as well out of the annual Rolls as other Records then extant. He was followed in in that method by the Compiler of the Book called Testa de Nevill. And the other Books of Knights fees were in like manner compiled for the use of the Barons and other Officers in the Kings business.

In relation to Baronage some questions or doubts have been formerly moved, which seem to have proceeded only from the want of a due knowledge of the ancient Usage and Records of this Realm. In the reign of K Henry VIII, it was doubted whether the Abbot of Tavistock was a Baron, or as it was then styled a Lord of Parliament. And to take-away that doubt, the King was pleased by a Patent-Letter of his Great-Seal, to grant to Richard Banham then Abbot of Tavistok, that he and his Successors Abbots there, should be Lords of Parliament (q). Whereas if a man would consult History, and especially Records, he might soon be satisfied that the Abbot of Tavistock for the time being, held of the King by Barony, to wit, by the service of fifteen Knights Fees (r). And it appeareth by the Rolls of the Kings Chancery, Chancery, that the Abbot of Tavistoke was summoned to Parliament with the other Ecclesiastical Barons, in the forty-ninth year of K Henry III (s); and, no doubt, he was summoned to the Parliaments of the succeeding Kings. For he was all along reputed a Baronial Abbot. However his having been always actually summoned, is a thing that cannot be undeniably proved, because the Clerks of the Chancery in former ages have used too much brevity in the enrolments of the several Writs of Summouce. For in the Rolls it is generally said in brief, Eodem modo scribitur ceteris Abbatibus & Prioribus Angliæ, without specifying the several Abbots and Priours who had Writs of Summouce directed to them (t).

I add; that it seemeth, a Baron was liable to be amerced, in case he failed to appear there according to the Summouce; unless he had Leave to be absent.

But concerning these points I may have occasion to speak more largely hereafter in another Book, if I live to finish what I have to say upon the subject of Parliaments (u).

In the twelfth year of K Henry II, Walter de Sainte-Foy was charged with 1*s*, for Relief for half a Knights Fee (i).

In capite. Abbot of Whitby.

IN the second year of K John, the Abbot of Whitebi fined to the King, that he might have a Protection not to be impleaded for any thing which he held of the King in chief, which belonged either to the Abbot or to his Monastery (k).

The Military Services charged upon Lands were a great Safeguard and Protection to the Realm.

Plenty of Knights.

IN the most ancient times, it was thought to be of great consequence or concern, that the Kingdom should be furnished with Valorous Knights, persons of prowess, brought up and enured to perform Knightly exploits. For this and other reasons, any man who had a sufficient quantity or portion of inheritable Land holden of the King by Knightly Tenure, might at the Kings Will be summoned to appear before the King, and take the Order of Knighthood.

In the nineteenth year of K Henry III, all the Sherifs of England were commanded by Close writs of the Great Seal, to make proclamation in their respective Counties, that all they who held of the King in chief one Knights fee or more, and were not as yet knighted, should take Arms and get themselves knighted, before the next Christmas, as they loved the tenements or Fees which they held of the King (l).

In the seventeenth year of K Henry III, the Honor of Dudley and other lands of Roger de Sumery were taken into the Kings hand, with all the chatels found thereon, because Roger did not Protection.

WHEN a Man was reteined in the Kings Service in his Army, that reteiner was a Protection to him for the time. Pleas or actions brought against him by the party were to stay till his Return from the Kings Service. For which purpose, upon application to the Kings Chancery, he readily obtained a Writ of Protection upon his case. Those Writs of Protection were well known in the Common Law, and were in continual use (n).

The

Barons of Great Lords.

IT is true, in ancient times the Earls and Barons of England did often call their chief Tenants Barones. Of this there are many instances in Formulare Anglicanum (o), and other books. The Earls and Great Lords did then in many particulars imitate the Form and Fashion of the Kings Court. As the King had, so they had their Dapifers or Seneschalls, Chamberlains, and other Officers in their Households, and likewise abroad their Barones, their chief Chivalerian Tenants (p).

But the Barones of the Earls and Great Men were styled Barones improperly, that is, onely by way of Resemblance.

The Barons properly so called were the Barones Regis. Of these principally we have been all-along speaking. All other persons who have by accident been called by this name, are excluded out of the present discourse.

Mr Selden, Sir Henry Spelman and others seem to have been fond of the Distinction of Barones majores and minores. But I do apprehend, it is a frigid Distinction, and of no solid use.

But the Kings Barons onely, and no others, were properly called Barons. For they and no others were the King's Men or Homagers holding of him by Barony.

Of these, some might be and were greater than others: that is, some of them might have, and indeed had, larger Baronies than others, a Greater number of Knights, and a greater extent of Demeanes and Rents. But in general they were all Peers.

As some Citizens of the same City may be greater than others, in Household or Wealth: But still they are all of the same state and degree.

And if a man has a mind to proceed further in trifling, he may subdistinguish, and say, there were Barones majores, minores, and minimi; meaning by the minimi the Barons of Ports and Burroughs.

So that in truth it was not worth the while to call these persons Barones minores, in opposition to the Barones majores, the Kings Barons. For the Former were of a class or order different from that of the Latter.

IN the North part of England there were persons called Vavassours, in the reign of K Henry I. There were Vavassours belonging to the Barony of the Archbishop of York (q), to the Barony of Robert Fossard (r). There were also Vavassours belonging to the Castle of Rockingham (s). In Normandy they had Vavassours; and also Lands called Vavassories. In the second year of K John, Robert de Ponte sold his Half-vavassory at Bouiler, to Robert de Montegomeri (t). But in England, I think the Vavassours were not numerous. BOOK II.

CHAPTER I.

- I. Of the ancient manner of Creating Earls by Title. II. Of the manner of Creating Barons by Title.

Itular-Baronies may be spoken-of next. In England, in ancient times Earls were usually created either by Charter under the Kings Great Seal, or by Patent Letter under the same Seal. The way of creating Earls by Charter was the most ancient. That way hath been thought to be coeval to the Norman Conquest. The manner of doing it was this. The King made a Charter of Creation under his Great Seal to such Earl: By the Charter, the King

to the Earl the Tertius denarius Comitatus, the third penny of the County: and then the King girded him with the Sword of the County or Earldom. I will here set down a few examples of this (u).

K Richard I, in or about the fifth year of his reign, created Geofrey Fitz Pierre Earl of Effex, and granted to him the Tertius denarius of the County of Effex (w). But in regard K Richard did not, in his life-time, gird the said Geofrey with the Sword of the Earldom of Effex, K John in the first year of his reign, performed that ceremony; at the same time, K John girded William Mareſcall with the Sword of the Earldom of Striguil (x).

In the tenth year of K Richard I, Hugh Bishop of Durham owed the King M marks, for the County or Earldom of Northumberland, and DC marks, for the exchange of Saberge (y).

I would fain have produced some of the old Charters of Creation of Earls, of the reigns of the ancient Kings, to wit of K Henry II, K Richard I, and K John. But none of these old Creations are to be found in the Kings Rolls.

Rex Omnibus ad quos &c. salutem. Sciatis, quod nos intime considerantes magna & gratuita obsequia, honores & labores, quæ dilectus & fidelis noster Thomas Percy Miles nobis multipliciter impendit, indiesque impendere non desistit, de gratia nostra speciali & ex certa scientia & mero motu nostris præfatum Thomam in Baronem regni nostri Angliæ tenore præsentium ereximus, præficimus, & creamus, eidemque Thomæ nomen, stilum, titulum & honorem Baronis Egremontis imponimus, damus & concedimus & assignamus, quod quidem Dominium de Egremont est infra Comitatum Cumbriæ], Habendum eidem nomen, stilum, titulum & honorem sibi & hæredibus suis masculis imperpetuum. Volentes ulterius & concedentes eidem Thomæ, quod ipse nomen Baronis Egremont habeat & gerat, ac Baro Egremont vocitetur & nuncupetur, ac hæredes sui prædicti Barones Egremont prædicti vocitentur & nuncupentur. Et idem Thomas & hæredes sui prædicti, ut Barones ejusdem regni nostri in omnibus, teneantur, tractentur & reputentur, & eorum quilibet teneatur, tractetur & reputetur, sedemque & locum suos in Parliamentis & Consiliis ac etiam in præfenciis regiis infra dictum regnum nostrum Angliæ inter cæteros Barones ejusdem regni nostri habeant, teneant & possideant, necnon omnibus & singulis præminenciis, libertatibus, privilegiis & immunitatibus ubicumque infra idem regnum nostrum & alibi gaudeant & utantur, adeo plene & integre ac eisdem modo & forma, quibus alii Barones dicti regni nostri & alibi ante hæc tempora melius, honorificentius & quietius usi fuerunt & gavis, seu ad præfens gaudent & utuntur, aliquo statu seu feoffamento per prædictum Thomam aut aliquem hæredum suorum de dicto Dominio de Egremont aut de aliqua inde parcella ad eorum usum quovismodo alicui fiendis non obstantibus. Et ulterius nos considerantes, ut præfatus Thomas & hæredes sui prædicti hujusmodi statum suum decentius & honorificentius manutenere & sustentare valeant, & quilibet eorum valeat, concessimus eidem Thomæ decem libras percipiendas singulis annis sibi & hujusmodi hæredibus suis masculis, Titles of Earl, Viscount, Baron.

AT the time of the Conquest Creations of Titular Earlships were in use in England: And they have been in use from that time ever since.

I do not at present remember the Age or Kings reign wherein the Title of Baron was first granted by Charter or Patent Letter of the Great Seal. Mr Selden of famous memory thought these Grants or Patents for the Title of Baron came into use in the reign of K Richard II (e).

In England the Title of Viscount is commonly thought to be of modern Date. The Beginning or introduction of that Title is usually ascribed to the reign of K Henry VI; in the case of John Viscount Beaumont (f).

In a Record of the reign of Henry I King of England, mention is made of a great man who is styled Anselmus Vic. Roth. I read the two words thus written contracted, Vic[ecom]es Roth[omagi], Viscount of Rouen. This Anselm fined to the King in half a mark of Gold, that he might hold in capite of the Bishop of Winton, certain lands which he held of Thomas de St John (g).

In the fourth year of K Henry II, mention is made of a great Lady masculis imperpetuum de exitibus, proficuis, firmis & reventionibus provenientibus de prædicto Comitatu Cumbr[ia]e per manus Vicecomitis ejusdem Comitatus pro tempore existentis, ad terminos Paschæ & Sancti Michaelis, per æquales portiones, eo quod expressa mencio de aliis donis & concessionibus per nos præfatos Thomæ ante hæc tempora factis in præsentibus minime facta existit non obstantibus; & hoc absque fine seu feodo quocumque pro præsentibus literis nostris aut sigillo vel sigillatione earundem nobis aliquantulum solvendis. In cujus &c. Teste Rege apud Westmonasterium xx^o die Novembris. Per breve de privato Sigillo, & de data prædicta &c. Pat. 28 Hen. 6. pars 1. m. 10.

Lady who is styled Vicecomitissa, without any other name or description (b).

In the fifth year of K Henry II, mention is made of a Vicecomitissa de Roth, accounting to the King for the Ferm of the Town of Hampton (i). And in the fifteenth year of K Henry II, mention is made of a Vicecomitissa de Bello monte (k).

In the third year of K Henry III, John le Vescunt or Viscunte held a Barony in Northumberland of the King in chief. He paid c l Relief for it; which was the Relief for an entire Barony (l).

In England the word Vicecomes signified in former times only a Sherif of a County. It was brought into use in England at or after the Norman Conquest. It is to be remembred, that the Lord or Ruler of Normandy was called Comes, Count; And that the persons whom the Earl or Count of Normandy set over the Provinces of that Countrey were called Vicecomites, because they were Vicegerents of their Earl or Prince. So it was also in England after the Conquest. The Sherifs of Counties were called Vicecomites: And these Vicecomites were usually the Princes Castellans or Prefects of his Castles; and commonly were Barons or reputed Barons. For in several Countries in Europe, Castellans were of the rank of Barons.

In progress of time, the name of Vicecomes, Viscount, came to be a mere Title of Honour, without any Prefecture annexed to it.

It is certain, that the Dignity or Title of Viscount and Viscountess was in use in Old times in Foreign Countries.

In France, there was Ralf Viscount and Emme Viscountess of Cenomannia or Mans (m), William Vicecomes Agathensis and Arfindis his Lady styled Viscountess (n).

It seemeth that Titular Baronies were built upon the Plan of Land-Baronies, in point of hereditary succession or descent.

K Richard II, by the common consent and counsel of all the Prelates Lords and Magnates of the Realm of England, and others of his Council, assembled in his Parliament holden at Westminster in the fourteenth year of his reign, and also at the special request of all the Commonalty of the said Realm, likewise gathered together in the same Parliament, did of his abundant Will,

Partly Title, partly Service.

THE following is a case of a Creation consisting partly in Title and partly in Tenure or Service.

King Edward III., in or about the eleventh year of his reign, by the common assent and advice of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others of his Council, assembled in his Parliament holden at Westminster, granted to William de Bohun the name and honour of Earl of Northampton; and girded him with the Sword as Earl; and granted to him xxl a-year Creation-money, payable out of the Ferm or Issues of the County of Northampton, by the hands of the Sherif for the time being; to hold to William and his heirs, of the King and his heirs for ever. The King also granted to the said Earl, by the assent of the Prelates, Earls, Barons, and others of his Council, assembled in his said Parliament, the Reversions of the Manour and Town of Staunford, and of the Manour and Town of Grantham, and of other Castles and Manours, to hold to the said Earl and the heirs Male of his body, at one thousand pounds per annum, by the Service of one Knights Fee (p).

Comes Palatinus.

WHAT was meant in England by the terms County Palatine. I must explain this by Example and Prefident rather than by Definition.

As to the Earl of Chester; from the Norman Conquest downward, he was a Great and Splendid Lord: But at what time or upon what occasion he first came to be styled an Earl Palatine, I do not remember.

As to the Earldom of Durham:

In the One and twentieth year of K Edward I, a great Cause was brought before the King and his Council, at the Kings Suit or Attachment, touching the behaviour of John Archbishop of York towards Anthony Bishop of Durham. The cause was first commenced before the Court of Kings Bench, Then brought before the Kings Council, and then before the Kings Council in Parliament. In the Court of Kings Bench, Richard de Brettevill, the Kings General Attorney, Pleadeth, amongst other things, that the Bishop of Durham hath two States, namely, the state of a Bishop as to Spirituals, and the state of a Comes Palatii, an Earl of the Palace as to his Temporalities (q).

Palatine Capacity of the former, and the Baronial Capacity of the later; as if men had not at that time in England a distinct notion of the Title of a Palatine (r).

The Earldom of Lancaster was created Palatine by a Charter of K Edward III, dated in the _____ year of his reign. The King by that Charter, amongst many other things therein contained, maketh John of Gaunt Earl Palatine of Lancaster, to have his Chancellour, Seal, Justices, and other Officers of State; He erecteth by that Charter the County Palatine of Lancaster, and granteth it to the said John of Gaunt in Fee simple. This Charter or Tranfaction, containing in it several Charters and Patent Letters, is enrolled both in the Kings Chancery and his Exchequer (s).

In ancient times, the Archbishop of York had a Regality, with great Powers, belonging to his Manour and County of Hexham or Hextildefham. In the one and twentieth year of K Edward I, his Liberties and Powers in Hextildefham were affirmed by the King's Council in Parliament. His Case was of this nature. In an Iter of Hugh de Cressingham and his Companions, a Writ of Quo Waranto was brought to warn the Archbishop of York, to shew by what Warrant he claimeth to have all Capitulas of the Crown delivered to his Bailif, to be pleaded by his Justices whom he will assign for that purpose, concerning all things emerging in his Manor of Hextildefham; and that all Pleas, as well of the Crown as other pleas, be pleaded by his Writs and his Justices in his said Manor; and to take and have the issues and profits arising thereby; and to do and execute by his Ministers all things pertaining to the Office of Sherif and Coroner; and that no Bailif of the King do enter into the said Manor, to exercise any office; and to have the Custody of Prisoners, and to make delivery of them at his Will; and to have a Market, gallows, chatells of fugitives and felons condemned in the said Manor, without the Leave and Hexham hath been formerly stiled a County Palatine (u). But in the 33d year of K. Henry VIII, it was stript of that Power (w).

In foreign Countries where this Palatine Title was in use, the person who had it was commonly called Comes Palatii, Comes Palatinus, a Count Palatine.

In fine, if the Reader hath leisure and Will to consult the Glossarists, concerning the Comites Palatini, and the numerous Train of other Comites, he may meet with plenty of amusement there.

Several of the Lords-Marchers of Wales had and enjoyed great Franchises in their Seigneuries, and even a Regalitem, a sort of a Royal Power, which made their Seigneuries look like Palatinates. For example, They had the first Cognisance of all Causes and Complaints within their Lordships, they had their Chancery, their Justiciars, and other great Officers, with an extensive jurisdiction belonging to the Chief Court of their Honor. For Example. Humfrey de Bohun Earl of Hereford and Essex had great Liberties within his Honour of Brecknock; he had a Court of his Honour, to determine causes between Lord and Tenants; he had the first or original Cognisance of all Causes there; he had a Chancery, a Seal for original writs, and in effect a sort of Regality (x).

breve suum de Quare Impedit, super advocatione ecclesiæ de Woundi, & eum a possessione præsentationis suæ inde ejecit, & insuper pro voluntate sua prædictum Priorem super quibusdam libertatibus suis, & rebus aliis, trahit in placitum ibidem, in regiæ dignitatis præjudicium —. Divers Altercations. The Earl alleges that the Prior non est perpetuus Prior de Goldclive, imo amotibilis pro voluntate Abbatiss de Becco Herlewini. The Prior replies, amongst other things, that the Earl in a Cause which the Prior now recites, had admitted him to be Perpetual Priour, and had pleaded with him as such. Dictum est per Judicium by the Court, to the Earls Attorney, that he should answer over, si sibi viderit expedire. Postea ad prædictum terminum venit prædictus Comes per attornatum suum, & dicit quod non debet ei ad hoc breve respondere, quia dicit, quod forma istius brevis est defectiva in plur[ibus], videlicet in primo, cum in dicto brevi contineatur, si Prior &c. tunc pone &c. Nec in dicto brevi continetur, quod dictus Comes aliquid fecit contra pacem; petit judicium si ad hoc breve de attachmento debeat respondere. Et si hoc non sufficiat, dicet aliud, &c.

Dicit etiam, quod in dicto brevi continetur, quod idem Comes implacitavit ipsum Priorem in Curia sua de Carlion, per breve suum de Quare Impedit, de advocatione ecclesiæ de Woundi, & eum a possessione præsentationis ejusdem ecclesiæ ejecit; quod non est verisimile nec juri consonum, quod aliqua ejectio fieri possit nisi de rebus corporalibus, quæ tangi possunt. Et petit judicium, ut supra. Et si hoc non sufficiat, dicet aliud, &c.

Dicit etiam, quod cum in dicto bre-vi contineatur, quod idem comes pro voluntate sua, ipsum Priorem in Curia sua de Carlion trahit in placitum, super quibusdam Libertatibus & rebus aliis, quæ sunt incerta. Et cum sit moris & consuetudinis regni Angliæ, quod in brevi Originali cancellariæ Domini Regis, contineri debeat certum, super quo tenens vel defendens debeat respondere, petit judicium, ut supra. Quia super incerto certum fieri non potest Judicium. Et si hoc, &c. dicet aliud, &c.

Dicit etiam, quod de prædictis Libertatibus seu rebus superius in dicto brevi non fit mentio, quod ipse Prior seu Prædecessores sui, implacitare seu implacitari non consueverunt, per alterius brevia quam per brevia Regis nunc, & prædecessorum suorum Regum Angliæ. Unde petit judicium ut supra. Et si hoc, &c. dicet aliud, &c.

Dicit etiam, quod cum prædictus Prior clamat habere quasdam Libertates, super quibus prædictus Comes trahit ipsum in placitum, nec dicit cujusmodi Libertates, nec in quibus villis, nec in quibus tenementis eas habere clamat, nec ligat suum breve utrum prædictæ Libertates sint in prædictis villis vel extra; petit judicium ut supra. Et si hoc, &c. dicet aliud, &c.

Et quæsitum est a prædicto Priore quid intendit recuperare per breve suum. Dicit, quod hoc quod Curia Regis consideraverit. Et aliud dicere non curat. Et super hoc datus est dies partibus, in crastino Purificationis Beate Mariæ ubicunque, &c; eo quod judicium nondum factum est. There is no Judgment. Trin. Plac. coram Rege 21 Edw. 1. Rot. 22.

The Office it self was a Barony or Honour; and may be styled an officiary Honour. When a Lord had a Land-Honour and one of these hereditary Offices, then he had two distinct Honours vested in him. Thus the Earl of Leicester was seised of the Honour of Leicester a Land-Honour, and also of the Honor Senescalciæ the Stewardship of England, an officiary Honour.

Offices in Heritage.

LET me, if you please, propose a Conjecture. When the ancient Kings of England began to grant the great feudal Estates, to wit Baronies and military Fees, to be holden in Heritage; then or near about that time, they began to grant the great Offices of their Palace also, to their Lords and Knights, and other smaller Offices to their Sergeants, to be holden in Heritage (a).

In

optulit se iiii^o die versus Gilbertum de Clare Comitem Gloucestræ & Herefordiæ, de placito, quod esset hic ad hunc diem, ad respondendum Regi & prædicto priori de Goldeclyve, de placito quare cum idem Prior implacitare non debeat, nec ipse aut prædecessores sui, per alterius brevia quam per brevia Regis de Cancellaria sua emanentia (for emanantia), implacitare consueverunt aliquibus temporibus retroactis, ac iidem Gilbertus & ballivi sui de Kaerleon distrinxerunt ipsum Priorem, ad respondendum in Curia ipsius Comitis de Karleon; propter quod super libertate prædicta, placitum super ipsos Priorem & Comitem in [Curia] Regis pendeat, & jam diu est, fuit pendens, & inhibutum esset eidem Comiti, quod pendente placito prædicto super libertate prædicta in Curia Regis, de districtionibus & gravaminibus aliquibus prædicto Priori superferderet, quousque prædictum placitum inter ipsos terminaretur. Prædictus Comes, pendente placito prædicto, ab hujusmodi gravaminibus & districtionibus bus non cessavit, nec duo brevia Regis sibi directa, de hujusmodi gravaminibus prædicto Priori non inferendis, ad certos dies coram Rege returnabilia, returnavit, ut dicitur. In Regis contemptum, & prædicti Prioris præjudicium non modicum & gravamen. Et ipse non venit. Et præceptum est Vicecomiti, quod attachiaret eum. The persons supposed to be of this Family were respectively called such a one Filius Comitis, Fitz-Count, or Son of the Earl. Perhaps Filius Comitis might be only the Earl of Britannies Son. It is to be known that anciently the Earl of Britanny had a very great Honour or Earls Fee in England; and was a Principal if not the chief Earl of England; and he was, I think, the greatest Homager (except the King of Scotland) that the King of England had. reason he might not unfitly be styled the Earl. The Christen-names of some of the Fitz Counts support the conjecture which I have made just above. For example. In the reign of K Henry the First of England, Brientius filius Comitis, Brient son of the Earl, is found named in records. At that time the Earl of Britanny had a son named Briend (as Augustin Du Paz relates in the History of the Earls and Dukes of Bretagne). But I cannot find that there was any other Baron or Great Lord about that time whose Christen-name was Brient. In this case what I have said about Fitz-Count is conjectural.

In ancient times the Earl of Britanny and Richmond was the Greatest Subject in the Kingdom of England, next to the Royal Family (g).

BOOK III.

CHAPTER I.

About Tenure.

OW concerning Tenure of the King in Capite.

Tenure is, where a Tenant holdeth of his Lord.

Here followeth a specimen tending to illustrate the Tenure in Capite.

Explanation of the phrase Tenure in Capite, and of the Nature of that Tenure.

FOR many years last past, men have spoken in England with great Confusedness and uncertainty concerning this Tenure in Capite. For want of a distinct knowledge, several persons have advanced

advanced frivolous and fictitious notions about it. This hath been the case with the Lord Chief Justice Coke (l), and divers other Gentlemen of the Common-law. But it is likely, men might soon have put an end to their trifling upon this head, if they would but have paused and considered awhile. There is no secret in this matter. The phrase en Chef is Gallick. And the phrase in Capite is a Gallicism translated into Latin or Romanick.

To hold of the King in Capite was to hold of him immediately, sine medio. I have in some measure explained this point already in another Work (m). But it must be farther explained and illustrated.

In the reign of K Henry III, the phrase in Capite was used in England to signify immediate, sanz moyenne. It was used in that sense for several centuries.

In the reign of K Edward II, (if I do not mistake the time), it was ordained, that the Chamberlain be chosen by the Greatmen, that he be one having skill and ability to guide and govern the Kings, Burgs, Demean-lands, and poor Demean-Husbandmen, and that he do take care of the Wards, reliefs, marriages, and all other issues of the Realm, except such as are already given or assigned by the King in Chief, that is, directly by the King himself, or by his immediate act or command (n). The same authentick piece last above quoted, directeth, That such law and judgment be made in the Court holden before the Lord-Constable

(l) It is to be observed, that regularly a Tenure of the King as of the person is a Tenure in Capite —.

And this Tenure of the King in Capite is said to be a Tenure of the King as of his Crown, that is, as he is King. — And therefore it is directly said, that a Tenure of the King in Capite is, when the land is not holden of the King, as of any Honour, Castle or Manor, &c. but when the land is holden of the King as of his Crown. Coke Comment. on Lit. fol. 108. a. ad sectionem 159.

ble, that there may be no occasion to appeal en Chief to the Parliament (o). And again, it directeth, that Justices itinerant do enquire in their Eire, of the behaviour and ministration of Sherifs, and of Serjeants in fee, and do challenge them at the Bar, and present the defaults to the King in Chief (p).

In the eighteenth year of K Richard II, it is found that Ranulph de Dacre held the Manour of Nethertraling in the Sherifrick of Rokesburgh in the Marches of Scotland, of the King in chief, by Homage and Fealty (q).

In the reign of K Henry IV, an aid was levied to marry the Kings eldest Daughter Blanche, to wit xxs for every Knights fee holden of the King sine medio, and xxs for all Lands of xxl a year in rent, holden of the King in Socage sine medio. John Wilcotes and others Collectours for Oxfordshire passed their Account for this Aid in that County in the third year of K Henry IV (r).

Status & Visus Compotorum* 3 Hen. 4. Rot. 9.

In fine, as in the ancient, so also in the modern times, the words in Capite signified in Chief (s).

There was Tenure in Capite in Foreign Kingdoms.

In the Kingdom of Sicily (t).

In Foreign Countries where there was Tenancy in Capite, there the Seniurage which was vested in the Lord, might be compared to that which some Men have called Directum dominium, a direct or immediate Superiority or Lordship. There the Lord was directus Dominus, and the Tenant directus or immediatus Vassallus.

But in regard the words Vassallus, Convassallus, &c. have not been in Former ages currently used in England, I forbear as much as I can, to use them in this Work. Because I would not innovate; and do chuse not to multiply words of Art.

It is said in the English Law-books, that all the lands in England in the hands of subjects, are holden mediately or immediately of the King (u). This proposition, I believe, is true. But it meriteth to be explained and illustrated. I will endeavour to explain it.

Tenure in Capite of a Subject.

FROM the time of the Norman Conquest to the reign of K Edward I the law or custom of England was this. A subject who was immediate Tenant to another subject was deemed to hold in Capite, to him and his heirs, of such subject who was his his Lord and of his heirs. The Estate vested in such Lord imported Seigneurage, and the Estate of the Tenant Tenure, to wit, Homage and Service. So that by means of under-feoffments, there might be a Seigneurage vested in several persons, one under another, and several subaltern Tenures in Capite. For this and other reasons, it oftentimes became necessary, for a Feoffor to warrant to his Feoffee the Land conveyed to him, contra Seniuragios, that is against the feoffers Superiour Lords (w); or else contra omnes gentes, against all men (x). Here the word Seniuragios is somewhat ungrammatical. It standeth for capitales dominos, or seniores, Seigneurs. And as to the word gentes, contra omnes gentes, it is not used in warranties as a Roman word, but a Romanick; as hath been observed in another Book (y); and is not to be translated, as Sir Edward Coke translateth it, against all nations (z); but against all men.

But this later general warranty was most usuall.

In the eighteenth year of K. Edward I, supervened the Edict or Ordinance commonly called the Statute of Qui emptores terrarum; which took-away Tenure of Holding in Capite of the Subjects one under another. But the regulation made or designed to be made by this Ordinance or Statute did not affect the King, as Judge Littleton affirmeth (a); and as other men will readily assent.

Of Holding of the Kings Person.

Concerning Tenure of the Kings Person, let us balance this Phrase; and consider how it is to be understood. According to the Feudal way of speaking, every Feudatary (in England we call such a one a Feoffee or Tenant in chivalrie) holdeth of some Living Person. Where there was a Feudatary, there was a Lord. Lord and Tenant were Mutuall or Relatives. We must remember remember that man cannot hold feudally of an Inanimate thing. A man cannot hold Land in fee of a Castle. But a living man, Tenant of a Manour or Land, may hold of a living man, Lord of a Castle. Immediate Tenure is properly, where a man holdeth to him and his heirs, of another man and his heirs; and where the Tenant in that case is in his Lords immediate Homage.

(w) — Warantizabunt ei & hæredibus suis prænominatam Terram cum omnibus pertinentiis suis, contra omnes homines & fœminas; & quod de omnibus rebus & servitiis, quæ contingere possunt, versus Seniuragios finaliter acquietabunt per prædicta servitia —. Formulare Anglic. Formula 320.

In England it came to pass in process of time, that some men were found to hold of the King, immediately or in Capite, as of the Crown; and others, immediately or in Capite, as of an Honor or Castle, then being in the Kings hand, by Escheat or Wardship. This puzzled them. And when they observed there were two Tenures of this sort, both called Tenure in Capite, they began to distinguish them. They who held of the King as of an Honor or Castle, were in common parlance said to hold in Capite of the Honor or Castle, that is, of the King, as of the Honor or Castle. To contradistinguish the said Tenure in Capite as of the Crown, from the Tenure in Capite as of an Honor or Castle, some person unluckily brought in the phrase of holding of the Kings Person.

But this phrase to hold of the Kings Person seemeth to be grounded upon an unexact notion. For in reality both he who holdeth of the King as of his Crown, and he who holdeth of the King as of an Honor, equally holdeth of the Kings Person; that is to say, of the King for the time being, or (if you please) of the King in perpetual Succession. And I do humbly apprehend, that in the nature of things, there is no other kind of holding of the Kings Person, besides that of holding of the King in perpetual Succession. If therefore I have observed right, the phrase to hold of the Kings Person, is not the language of ancient Records; at least in those ages, in which men understood Tenures best, and spoke most exactly about them; particularly, in the ages antecedent to the reign of K Richard II and K Henry IV. The phrase seems to have been brought into use in the modern ages. For example. In the reign of K Henry VIII, they spoke of holding of the King as of his Person, as appeareth in Dyers Reports (b). In the Statute of the first year of K Edward VI, mention is made of holding of the King as of his Person (c).

And

(b) Dyer, fol. 45. a. and fol. 58. a. the King as of his Person, or ancient possessions. Statut. 1 Edw. 6. chap. 4. pl. 6 anno 36 H 8.

(c) A Clause concerning Tenure of sect. 2.

And since the reign of K Edward VI, this phrase hath been used by many others. But upon the foundation of what I have spoken above in this section, I do humbly propose, that the phrase to hold of the Kings Person may from henceforth be dismissed and put out of use, as deceitful and tending to error.

In ancient times, Tenure of the King in Capite was twofold; namely, Tenure of the King in Capite ut de Corona, as of his Crown; and Tenure of the King in Capite ut de Honore, Baronia, Castro, as of an Honor, Barony, Castle, being in the Kings hands.

Let us consider what it was to hold of the King in Capite ut de Corona. This holding of the King in Capite ut de Corona was the primary and original holding of the King in Capite: And this was, when a man was originally feft by the King himself, out of his own Demeane, to hold to the Fee and his heirs, of the King and his heirs. This, I say, was the original holding in Capite. At first, that is, when Tenures were first brought into use in England, and before any Escheat or Wardship had hapned, there was no other holding of the King in Capite besides this. Then, to hold of the King in Capite signified this holding only. I will put a case. The case indeed is but a mere supposition, and I use it only for the sake of Explanation. I say, put the case, that during the space of twenty years, or any other given space of time, after the Norman Conquest, and after the first general Fesment of Lands all over England, that no Escheat or Wardship fell into the hand of the King for the time being. In that case or state of things, all persons who held of the King in Capite, held of the King in Capite ut de Corona. For during all that given space of time there was no other holding of the King in Capite besides this. Hence it came to pass, that the phrase to hold of the King in Capite doth many times signify this holding of the King in Capite ut de Corona.

In the third year of K John, in the case of Robert le Chamberlain, the question was, Whether the said Robert a Tenant in chivalry had right to hold the Fee now disputed, in Demeane of the King in Capite, or Simon de Kyme to hold it in Demeane as of the Honour of Gloucester (d). Afterwards, when Escheats and Wardships ships fell into the Kings hand, the phrase, to hold of the King in Capite ut de Honore was found convenient and even necessary, to contradistinguishing this Holding, from the primary and original Holding, which was, as hath been often said above, ut de Corona.

These Honors or some of them were often in the Kings hand; sometimes by Wardship, when the heir was under age; and sometimes they were annexed to the Crown by Escheat, when the Lord of the Honor died without heir. We are now to speak concerning Honors which were vested in the Crown by Escheat. When an Honor was vested in the Crown by Escheat, it was still called an Honor even whilst it continued in the Crown; as the Honor of Boloigne, of Peeverel, of Arundel, and the rest; sometimes with the addition of the words, qui est in manu Regis, and sometimes without those words.

Lands which were holden immediately of the King as of his original Inheritance the Terra Regis (mentioned in Domesday-book in each County), were said to be holden of the King in Capite, in general terms: And if a man held Lands of the King in Capite as of the Kings original Inheritance, he was said to hold of the King ut de Corona. Here, the phrase holding ut de Corona was used in contradistinction to holding of the King ut de Honore, or ut de Baronía (e).

Corona, and holding of the King in Chief ut de Honore, was useful and ancient.

In the twelfth year of K Edward II, Thomas de Inglesthorp held the moieties of the Manors of Reynham and Issington of the King in Chief by Knight-service, as of the Honor of Hauleigh, and not as of the Crown. If he had held of the King ut de Corona, he was bound to do personal Service in the Kings Army, but if he held of the King ut de Honore, it sufficed for him to pay Escuage for that Army. He by ignorance had acknowledged that he held of the King ut de Corona, whereby he had bound himself to do personal Service. But upon discovering his mistake, he sued-for and obtained a Writ out of the Kings Chancery, whereby the King commanded the Barons of the Exchequer, that if they found by Records, that Thomas held the said Moieties of the King as of the said Honor, and not ut de Corona, then they should acquit him of corporal Service in the Kings Armies; provided that he pay Scutage when it shall be assessed on the Tenants of the said Honor (f).

IN the twelfth year of K Edward III, in the Court of Exchequer, in a Case relating to Roger de Huntingfeld, a Question arose, whether the Lands of Roger were holden of the King ut de Corona, or ut de Baronia vel Honore. The King sent two Writs of his Great Seal to the Treasurer and Barons of his Exchequer, commanding them to make Search in the Book of Domesday, the Books of Knights Fees, and other Records of the Exchequer, and to call several Judges of the Common Law, Sergeants and others of the Kings Council, to their assistance, and certify to the King what they found upon such Search. To each of those Writs the Treasurer and Barons returned to the King in his Chancery a Certificate of one and the same tenour; by which Certificate they declared and set-forth several things which were found upon the said Search. They also certified, that they called to them the Kings Justices of his Common Bench, his Sergeants-Pleaders, and others of his Council, and had maturely considered the case: And that, as to the words contained in the said Book of Domesday, they were not able to make a Declaration or Interpretation of them, unless just as the words of the said Book sounded. Nevertheless, considering all the premises, the said Court of Exchequer, the Justices, Sergeants and others of the Kings Council were of opinion, that it was not reasonable for the King to remove his hands from that which belonged to him in this case by the Prerogative of his Royal Dignity, unless the Parties prosecuting could produce some farther Proof; concerning which, they judged that such Parties as would prosecute their Claim in this behalf ought to be heard. Memorandum, this Certificate is duplicated: One is delivered to Peter de Richemund, the other to Nicolas de Hulm, to be carried at their peril to the King. And memorandum, the Justices who were called to the Treasurer and Barons upon this occasion were, Geoffrey le Scrop Chief Justice of the King's Bench, John de Stonore Chief Justice of the Common Bench, Richard de Aldeburgh, (b) Cantebrigia. De Certificatione facta Domino Regi de terris Rogeri de Huntingfeld & servicio inde.

Dominus Rex mandavit hic duo brevicia sua de Magno Sigillo suo, quæ irrotulantur in Memorandis alterius Rememoratoris, inter brevicia directa Baronibus de hoc termino, unum videlicet rotulo x^o, & aliud rotulo xv^o, sub eodem tenore in hæc verba. Edwardus Dei gratia Rex Angliæ, Dominus Hiberniæ & Dux Aquitaniæ, Thesaurario & Baronibus suis de Scaccario salutem. Cum quidam Magnates & alii fideles nostri penes nos, pro terris & tenementis, quæ fuerunt Rogeri, de Huntyngfeld defuncti, & quæ de ipsis tenentur, prout per inquisitiones inde post mortem præfati Rogeri, de mandato nostro captas, & in Cancellaria nostra retornatas, plenius apparet, & quæ, occasione mortis ejusdem, & ratione minoris ætatis hæredis ipsius Rogeri, capta sunt in manum nostram, extra manum nostram habenda prosequantur, nomine custodiæ tenenda, asserentes ipsum Rogerum aliqua terras seu tenementa de nobis in Capite die quo obiit nullatenus tenuisse, per quod custodia omnium terrarum & tenementorum, quæ fuerunt prædicti Rogeri die obitus sui, ad nos pertinere deberet ista vice; & licet compertum sit per aliquas evidencias in Cancellaria nostra residentes, quod Rogerus de Huntyngfeld tenuit in Bokefworth quartam partem feodi unius Militis de nobis in Capite, & quod Willelmus de Huntyngfeld pater prædicti Rogeri, cujus hæres ipse fuit, & filius & hæres Rogeri de Huntyngfeld dudum defuncti, solvebat ad Scaccarium prædictum relevium suum, videlicet de quarta parte unius feodi Militis in Bokefworth, & quæ per quandam certificationem Thesaurarii & Baronum de eodem Scaccario, tempore Domini E nuper Regis Angliæ patris nostri in Cancellariam suam missam. Similiter in libro feodorum, sub titulo Baronis Pycoti, sit compertum, quod Rogerus de Huntyngfeld tenuit in Bokefworth quartam partem unius feodi Militis de Rege in Capite, & in libro qui dicitur Domefday, in Comitatu Cantabrigiæ, sub titulo Terræ Roberti Gernoun in Pipefworth hundredo, annotatur sic, Bokefworth tenet Picot tres hidas & dimidium, super servicio quod debetur de dicto Manerio de Bokefworth. Volentes tamen tam per declarationem juris nostri quam aliorum prædictorum, in hac parte plenius certiorari, si terræ & tenementa quæ de nobis tenentur in Capite, & quæ sub titulo Baronis Pycoti, & aliis hujusmodi titulis in dictis libris scribuntur & inseruntur, teneantur de nobis ut de Corona, an ut de Baronia vel Honore, & qualiter dicta verba, quæ sic in eodem libro de Domefday reperiuntur interpretanda & intelligenda, juxta vim & effectum eorundem verborum & morem Scaccarii prædicti, existunt, & si dictæ tres hidas & dimidium ad servitium de dicto Manerio de Bokefworth debitum se extendant necne, & si sic, tunc qualiter & quomodo, & utrum custodia omnium terrarum & tenementorum, quæ fuerunt præfati Rogeri, ut præmittitur, ratione dicti servitii nobis de prædicto Manerio de Bokefworth, quod idem Rogerus tenuit in Dominico suo ut de feodo die quo obiit, sicut in inquisitionibus prædictis inter cætera continetur, debiti, an alicujus alterius servitii seu juris idem Manerium de Bokefworth contingentium, quæ in eodem Scaccario poterint inveniri, ad nos debeat pertinere. Comperimus etiam alibi in eodem libro in dicto Comitatu Cantabr[igiæ], sub hujusmodi titulo de Baronia, videlicet sub tali titulo, Baronia Gilberti Pech sic: Gilbertus Pech tenet Manerium de Brunne de Domino Rege in Capite in communa Baroniæ suæ. Et postmodum sub tali titulo, Baronia Roberti filii Walteri sic, Abbas de Ramesia tenet feoda quatuor Militum in Capite de Domino Rege. Et sic per ista verba, de Rege in Capite, absque aliqua mentione facta de Corona, in eodem libro annotantur ibidem quamplures, qui tenent de Rege ut de Corona, distinctioque & separatio fiunt ibidem in diversis locis de hiis, qui tenent de Rege ut de honoribus, ab hiis, qui tenent de Rege in Capite, & similiter ab hiis, qui tenent de Baroniis.

Comperimus enim in eodem libro in Ebor[aco], sub titulo, De feodis & honore Willelmi de Percy sic, Henricus Camerarius tenet in Capite, de Domino Rege in Warrum quartam partem unius feodi, & in Aclun, & Lemugg unum feodum.

Comperimus etiam in Memorandis, de anno regni Domini E quondam Regis Angliæ Avi vestri xviii, inter Communia de Termino Sancti Michaelis, sic, Robertus de Percy venit coram Baronibus, & dat Regi xxv s, pro relevio suo de quarta parte unius feodi, quod de Rege tenet in Capite in Quarrum, sicut recognovit.

Comperimus insuper in dicto libro feodorum in Lincolnia talem titulum, Particularia feodorum, quæ tenentur de Rege in Capite & de aliis Honoribus & sub titulo illo verba subscripta. Martinus Martell tenet quartam partem unius Militis in Canewyk de Domino Rege in Capite.

Fulco de Lifuris tenet xv partem unius feodi de Domino Rege in Capite de novo feoffamento.

Simon de Kyma tenet dimidium feodum in Stotteby de Domino Rege in Capite.

Johannes de Nevill tenet duo feoda Militis in Stretton de feodis H Paynel, & ipse de Domino Rege.

Robertus de Welle tenet in Aby & Scrubby unum feodum Militis de Honore de Dover, Kettelbertus de Keles tenet quartam partem unius feodi in Sutton de Baronia Simonis de Kyma. Agnes Pollard tenet tertiam partem unius feodi in Estravendale in honore de Ponte Fracto. Agatha Trussabut tenet in Melton & alibi unum feodum Militis de Domino Rege in Capite.

Rogerus de Moubray tenet unum feodum in Insula de Domino Rege de veteri feoffamento.

Et in eodem libro in Kancia sub tali titulo, Lestum de Sypweye sic, Simon de Crioll tenet Pacamanston, & pertinet ad duo feoda in Hefstetford de Domino Rege, de honore de Pertico.

Nicolaus de Marines unum feodum in Otrepole.

Robertus de Scales unum quartum in parva Wilminton de Domino Rege de honore de Pertico.

(c) Suffolcia. Thomas Taleuaz tenens terrarum & tenementorum, quæ fuerunt Roberti Taleuaz consanguinei & hæredis Thomæ Taleuaz, habuit diem hic modo ad octabas S Trinitatis per breve, ad respondendum Domino Regi de relevio prædicti Roberti, de uno Mesuagio cum pertinentiis in Shatesham, quod dictus Thomas tenuit de Rege in Capite, die quo obiit, ut de Honore de Eye in manu Regis existente, & pro quo Mesuagio dictus Robertus fecit Regi fidelitatem, sicut continetur in Originali de anno nono hujus Regis.

Et idem Thomas venit & cogn[oscit], quod tenet Mesuagium prædictum de Domino Rege in Capite, ut de Honore prædicto, per servitium faciendi unam apperanciam semel per annum ad Curiam Domini Regis de Eye, & quod paratus est facere relevium Domino Regi pro Mesuagio prædicto, prout Curia &c. The Court ordered that the Escheatour do enquire and certify the Court. Postea videlicet in quindena Paschæ, anno quarto Regis E filii hujus Regis, Escaetor, videlicet Simon de Bereford, retornavit hic breve sibi super hoc directum, indorsatum sic; Inspectis Memorandis de temporibus Prædecessorum meorum, nuper Escaetorum Domini E Regis Patris Domini Regis nunc, compertum est per inquisitiones coram eis factas, quod illud mesuagium, de quo fit mentio in isto brevi, tenetur de Rege, ut de Honore de Eye, per servitium veniendi ad turnum de Eye, semel in anno post Pascham, pro omni servitio. Et prædictus Thomas venit per Willelmum de Marlesford Attornatum suum, & petit admitti ad faciendum relevium inde, prout, &c. Et quia Barones volunt plenius deliberare inde antequam ulterius, &c. dictus Thomas adjornatur ulterius per prædictum Attornatum, ad recipiendum quod Curia, &c; sicut continetur in Memorandis anni quarti Regis E filii Regis hujus, inter dies datos de Termino Paschæ. *Trin. (d) Effex[ia]. Simon de Echingham, Frater & hæres Roberti de Echingham, Fratris & hæredis Willelmi de Echingham, qui quidem Robertus debet Domino Regi rationabile relevium, de omnibus terris & tenementis, quæ dictus Willelmus tenuit in Capite, die quo obiit, de Domino E nuper Rege Angliæ, Patre Regis nunc, & pro quibus idem Robertus fecit homagium eidem Regi E patri, xxv^o die Julii anno regni sui xx^o sicut continetur in Originali de eodem anno, dat domino Regi x marcas, pro relevio dicti Roberti, pro Manerio de Pekeden in Comitatu Suffex[ia], quod dictus Willelmus tenit in Capite de prædicto Rege E patre, per servitium duorum feodorum Militum Moritonæ, sicut idem Simon per Philippum de Norwyco attornatum suum modo recognovit

In or about the fourteenth year of K Richard II, it was found by an Escheatours enquest, that John de Loudham Chivaler held the Manour of Walton in Derbyshire of the King in Capite, as of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of Suit to Court, for all Services (e). Afterwards, in the eighteenth year of K Richard II, it was alleged in the Court of Exchequer, that John de Loudham held the Manor of Walton in Derbyshire of the King in Capite, as of the Honor of Peverell, by the service of one Knights Fee (f).

In

cognovit, & sicut continetur in quodam processu habito super operatione relevii prædicti, alibi in hiis Memorandis inter Recorda de hoc Termino, ubi inter cætera annotatur, quod dictus Simon concessit, quod si imposterum compertum fuerit prædictum Manerium teneri de Rege per servitium duorum Magnorum feodorum, seu per majus servitium quam superius recognovit; se velle & debere onerari de relevio inde prout Curia &c. annotatur eciam ibidem, quod prædictus Willelmus tenuit alia tenementa de Rege, ut de Baronia de Hastyns, quæ est Johannis de Britannia, in manu dicti Regis E patris tunc existente, de quorum relevii exactione ad opus Regis idem Simon recessit sine die, ob causam annotatam ibidem, & similiter, quod tenuit x acras terræ in Bedyngamme de Rege in Capite, ut de honore de Aquila in in manu Regis existente, per servitium unius sextæ Curie ad Curiam de Tettenore de tribus septimanis in tres septimanas. Pro quibus x acris terræ idem Simon est ad judicium, qualiter debet onerari de relevio inde, sicut continetur ibidem.

Postea quia dictus Simon non solvit prædictas x marcas, præceptum est Vicecomiti Surr[eia] & Suffex[iæ], quod fieri faceret, Ita &c. in Craftino Sancti Hillarii. Ad quem diem Vicecomes non retornavit breve. Ideo sicut alias, Ita &c. a die purificationis beatæ Mariæ in xv dies.

Postea dictus Simon fecit finem cum Domino Rege per vi d, pro relevio suo de x acris terræ in Beddyngham supra dictis, quæ quidem decem acræ tenentur per servitium unius sextæ Curie, ad Curiam de Tettenore, de tribus sept[imanis] ad tres sept[imanas], sicut superius continetur; quæ quidem secta valet per annum vi d, prout patet per extentam inde factam, & annotatam in dictis Memorandis hujus anni, inter dicta Recorda de hoc Termino Sancti Michaelis. Mich. Communia 7 Edw. 3. Rot. 4. inter Fines, &c.

In the nineteenth year of K James I, Sir Richard Beaumont Knight, was distrained to do homage and fealty for the Rectory of Sandhall, which was holden of the King, as of the Honour of Hampton-Court (o).

In the same nineteenth year, Thomas Metham was distrained to do homage and fealty for the Manour of Pollington, and other Manours, which were holden of the King, as of his Duchy of Lancaster (p).

Although in several of the cases cited in this Chapter, the words in Capite are not expressed; manifestly, they are understood or meant. For when a man holdeth, to him and his heirs, of the King and his heirs, and is in the Kings immediate Homage, or (in other words) hold of the the King immediately, this is Tenancy in Capite: And the Tenant in those cases was as really and effectually the Kings Tenant in Capite, as if the words in Capite had been expressed.

I have spoken above concerning Tenure in Capite of the King, ut de Honore or Baronia. What I have there spoken is in general or prima facie to be understood of Honors or Baronies which were vested in the King by Esfcheat. I must here add, that the case was the same mutatis mutandis in relation to Honors and Baronies which were in the Kings hand by reason of Wardship. For we must remember, that in ancient time the King was deemed to to be seised pro tempore of the Manors and Lands of his Ward ut in dominio; to wit, in like manner as he was seised of the Manors and Lands devolved to him by Escheat.

Bishopricks void.

THE same may be also said mutatis mutandis concerning vacant Bishopricks and Abbies of Royal Foundation. These the ancient Kings of England did also, jure prærogativo, hold ut in dominico, as in demean, during the Voidance (q). But this Law or Custom hath been long since antiquated or altered.

In the reign of K Richard II, John Bishop of Durham, by his Patent Letter granted Licence to Robert de Bynchestre, to make a Fesment in fee of certain Manors holden of him (the Bishop) in Capite (r).

In Capite ut de Honore.

THE Honor of Breghinowe with the homages, services and pertinencies thereof came into the hand of K John, by the forfeiture of William de Braiosa Lord of it. Philips son of Wastellion, a Tenant in chivalrie of that Honor, made Homage to K John for his Tenancy, at the time when the Honor was in the hands of K John. Afterwards K John restored the said Honor, with the Homages, services and pertinencies, to Giles de Breause. After that restitution, Philip son of Wastellion and his heirs made their homage to Giles de Breause and his heirs, and not to the King. The case, as it was contested in the Kings Court, was this.

In the eighteenth year of K Edward I, Madoc son of Mereduc, nephew and one of the heirs of Philip son of Meuric deceased, who held of the King in chief; Howel son of Leulin nephew and another of the heirs of the said Philip; Mereduc son of Richard and Gladusa his wife, sister and third of the heirs of the said Philip; Wernella daughter of Meuric, sister and fourth of the heirs of the said faid Philip, and Leukina daughter of Meuric, niece and fifth of the heirs of the faid Philip, came before the King, and alleged [by their Petition], that the faid Philip their ancestour held of K Henry III, the Land of Donewaldeflond in the Land of Bergeveny, by Knight-service, and dyed in the Homage of the present King. After Philips death, John de Hasting intruded into the faid Land. They pray the King to seise the faid Land into his hand, as that whereof he ought to have primer seisine; and primer seisine being so had, they pray he would restore the Land to the right heirs. They produce a Charter of K John, testifying that he gave the faid Land to Philip son of Wastellion their Ancestour to be holden of the King and his heirs, by the service of the Fee of one Knight.

John de Hasting was Tenant in possession of the faid Land, and being present in the Kings Court, he was asked, whether he could shew cause why the King should not have primer seisine; he saith, that he hath the faid Fee as his purpart of the inheritance of George de Cantelon, which descended to him and Milisent de Monte Alto; and that he cannot answer without Milisent. She came upon summonce; and answereth with the faid John. They jointly say, that William de Breuse ancestour to them, and to Humfrey de Bokun Earl of Hereford, and to Maud de Mortimer, whose heirs they all are, dyed seised of the faid Fee. And that after his death, the faid Fee fell to them as their purpart. Wherefore they pray aid of their parceners. So Maud was summoned in Herefordshire, and Humfrey in Gloucestershire.

The faid Madoc and others being asked how they can prove that Homage was done to K Henry III, do say, they will prove it by Knights and others who were present when the homage was done. William de Inge, who followed for the present King, averreth, that the faid Philip was the kings homager, and that K Henry III died seised of the Homage of the faid Philip ap Meurik for the faid Land. And he saith, that the faid John and Milisent had nothing in the faid Tenements [or Lands] but by their Intrusion. He prayeth the Judgment of the Court, whether Parcenarie, Procefs of Plea, or Effoin, ought to take place upon the Kings Primer seisine aver. He saith also, that the faid Philip did Homage to K Henry III, for the faid Tenements, at Worcester, the fourth day next after the Battel of Evesham. And this he is ready to prove by credible persons who were then present and saw the same.

Worcester,

And John and Milisent say, that the said Philip did not hold of K. Henry III; and that K. Henry III did not dye seised of the said Homage for the said Land.

And whether Parcenarie, process of plea, or essoin, ought to be allowed or not, before it is known whether the said K. Henry died seised of the Homage of the said Philip for the said Tenements or not; the Court holden before the King is of Opinion, that in such case they ought to proceed by way of proof, by those who were present and saw [what was done]; especially, because Witnesses who are produced in this case, are looked-upon as Witnesses who are named in Charters, in which case, no man can be challenged either for enmity or friendship, according to the Law of the Realm used hitherto; and also because such Witnesses ought to swear to say the truth precisely, without Conscience [or, having regard to their own knowledge]; after the manner of the Grand Assize: And also, because the truth may better be made to appear by persons who saw and were present; than by the knowledge of the Countrey [to wit, of Jurors] who were not present. Wherefore it is ordered, that the litigants do proceed to their Proof; so that each witness be examined by himself. And accordingly, Sir Hugh de Turbevill Knight, being sworn and examined saith, that the said Philip did Homage to K. Henry III, for the Land of Donewaldeslonde, whereof the Charter of K. John maketh mention, and he saw the said Homage done in the Priory at Worcester, in a Chamber below-stairs, as the King went out of the Chapel after Mass, on the Saturday next after the Battel of Evesham. And he saith, that Robert Waleraund encharter'd him by words of Homage, cartavit eum per verba Homagii; and that there were then present Sir Roger de Clifford, Sir Hamon Le Estraunge, Roger de Leyburn, the said Robert Waleraund, and several others whose names he doth not at present know. Being asked, what clothes the King had on at that time, or what clothes the said Welshman [Philip son of Mewric] had on, he saith, he doth not know. In like manner, several other Witnesses were examined about the Facts. Their respective pective Depositions are set-down at large, and may be seen hereunder in the columns.

Afterwards, because it doth not yet fully appear, whether the Producing the said Charter, and the foresaid Depositions, do sufficiently operate to declare the Kings Right, the Court did, over and above, order William de Inge who followed for the King, to sue-forth a Writ or Writs to summon Jurours. So a Writ issued to the Sherif of Herefordshire to summon xxiii, and a Writ issued to the Sherif of Worcestershire, to summon xxiii Jurours; to certify the King concerning the said Homage. Whereupon, twelve Jurours, six out of Herefordshire and six out of Worcestershire, appeared in the Court holden before the King; namely, Sir Simon de la Bere Knight, Sir Henry de Hereford Knight, Walter de Roubury, Thomas le Wasre, Thomas Wydye, Henry de Lude; and Simon de Crombe, Ralf de Littleton, John de Muscegros, Richard de Petbeley, William le Jovene, and Walter de Cateskull. These Jurours say upon their oath, that the Honor of Bregbinowe, with the homages, services, rents, and other pertinencies thereof, came into the hand of K John, and that Philip son of Wastellion did Homage to the said K John for the Land of Donewaldestland, at the time when the said Honor was in the hands of the said K John. They say, that the said K John restored the said Honor, with the said homages, as freely as he held the same to Giles de Breause, Ancestour of the said John de Hasting and Milisent. They say, that always after the said Honor was so restored, the said John de Hasting and his ancestours, were seised of the Homage of the said Philip son of Meuric and his ancestours, for the said Land of Donewaldestland. And they say, that upon Enquiry they cannot find, that Philip son of Meuric, or any of his ancestours, ever made Homage to K Henry III, for the said Land of Donewaldestland, after the reddition which K John made to the said Giles. And because it is found by the said Jury, that the said John de Hasting did not intrude into the said Land, the Court doth adjudge, that the said John and Milisent be dismissed from this Court without day; and that the said Madoc and the other heirs of the said Philip do take nothing by their Petition, but be amerced for their wrongful complaint; but the King is pleased to pardon pardon the said amercement; saving the right of the King and his heirs, when he or they shall hereafter pursue in this Plea; and saving the right of the said Heirs of Philip son of Meuric, when they shall hereafter pursue in this case (s).

Madocus filius Mereduci, Nepos & unus hæredum Philippi filii Meurici defuncti, qui de Rege tenuit in Capite; Howelus filius Leulini, Nepos & alter hæredum ejusdem Philippi, Mereducus filius Ricardi & Gladusa uxor ejus, soror & tertia hæredum ejusdem Philippi, Wernella filia Meurici, soror & quarta hæredum ejusdem Philippi; & Leukina filia Meurici, nepota & quinta hæredum ejusdem Philippi venerunt coram Rege, & dixerunt, quod prædictus Philippus, antecessor ipsorum, cujus hæredes ipsi sunt, tenuit de Domino H Rege Patre Regis nunc, terram de Donewaldestond in terra de Bergeveny, per servitium Militare, & obiit in Homagio Regis nunc. Post cujus mortem Johannes de Hasting intravit se in prædicta terra. Et pet[unt], quod Dominus Rex faciet seifire terram illam in manum suam, ut illam, cujus seisinam primam habere debet, & habita seifina illa, quod reddat eis terram illam rectis hæredibus. Et proferunt cartam J Regis, quæ testatur, quod prædictus Rex dedit prædictam terram Philippo filio Wastellionis antecessori suo, tenend[am] de ipso Rege & hæredibus suis, per servitium feodi unius Militis. Et quia Johannes de Hasting tenet prædictam terram, prædictus Johannes, qui præfens fuit in Curia Regis, Requis[itus], siquid sciret dicere, quare Dominus Rex primam seisinam habere non debeat, Dicit, quod habet feodum illud in partem hereditatis, quæ fuit Georgii de Cantilupo, quæ ei descendebat & Milisenta de Monte Alto; & dicit, quod non potest sine prædicta Milisenta respondere. Quæ postmodum venit per sum[monitionem], & respondet cum prædicto Johanne. Et dicunt, quod Willelmus de Breuf[e] antecessor ipsorum, & antecessor Humfridi de Bohun Comitis Herefordiæ, & Matill[idis] de Mortuo Mari, cujus hæredes ipsi omnes sunt, obiit seifitus de prædicto feodo. Post cujus mortem illud feodum cecidit in partem ipsorum; & petunt auxilium de participibus suis. Ideo sum[moneantur], quod sint a die Paschæ in tres septimanas ubicunque &c. ad respondendum simul cum eis, si voluerint. Et prædicta Matillis sum[moneatur] in Comitatu Herefordiæ, & prædictus Humfridus in Comitatu Gloucestriæ. Et prædictus Madocus & alii quæ[er]iti, qualiter possunt verificare Homagium factum Domino H Regi, dicunt, quod per Milites & alios qui præfentes fuerunt, quando factum fuit illud Homagium; ideo datus est eis idem dies. Ad quem diem, iidem Humfridus de Bohun & Matill[is] de Mortuo Mari fuerunt effonia ti. Et super hoc Willelmus Inge, qui sequitur pro Rege, dicit, quod paratus est verificare sicut Curia Regis, &c. quod prædictus Philippus fuit Homo Regis, & quod Dominus H Rex obiit seifitus de Homagio prædicti Philippi ap Meurik, de terra prædicta. Et dicit, quod prædicti Johannes & Milisenta nichil habuerunt in prædictis tementis, nisi per intrusionem suam, &c. Et petit judicium, si parcenaria, processus placiti, seu effonium, locum habere debeat super prima seifina Regis habenda. Et dicit, quod prædictus Philippus fecit Homagium Domino H Regi, pro prædictis ten[ementis], apud Wigorniam, quarto die proximo post Bellum de Evesham. Et hoc pa-ratus est probare & verificare per fide dignos qui tunc ibidem interfuerunt, & viderunt, prout Curia consideraverit &c.

Et Johannes & Milifenta dicunt, quod prædictus Philippus non tenuit de H Rege, nec idem H de prædicto Homagio obiit feifitus de prædicta terra &c.

Et quia utrum parcenaria, processus placiti, seu effonium, allocari debeat vel non, antequam sciatur utrum prædictus H Rex obiit feifitus de Homagio prædicti Philippi, de prædictis ten[ementis] vel non, Visum est Curiae, quod in tali casu procedi debet per modum probationis, per illos qui interfuerunt & viderunt, maxime cum testes nominati in isto casu accipiuntur loco testium in scriptis nominatorum; in quo casu nullus calumpniari potest nec pro inimicitia nec pro amicitia, secundum legem Regni hactenus usitatam; Et etiam quia hujusmodi testes jurare debent de veritate dicenda præcise, absque conscientia, ad modum Magnæ Assisæ; Et etiam quia veritas magis liquere potest per videntes & præfentes, quam per noticiam patriæ quæ non interfuit; Ideo procedatur ad probationem; Ita quod quilibet per se sit examinatus. Et Hugo de Turbevill Miles, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod prædictus Philippus fecit Homagium Domino H Regi de terra de Donewaldeslond, unde carta J Regis facit mentionem; Et vidit apud Wigorniam in Prioratu, Homagium prædictum esse factum, in una bassa Camera, sicut Rex exivit de Capella post Missam, die Sabbati proxima post Bellum de Evesham. Et dicit, quod Robertus Waleraund cartavit eum per verba Homagii. Et erant ibi præfentes Dominus Rogerus de Clifford, Dominus Hamo Le Estraunge, Rogerus de Leyburn, & prædictus Robertus Waleraund, & plures alii, de quorum nominibus ignorat ad præfens. Requis[itus], qua veste REX indutus erat, vel qua veste ille Wallens[is], Ignorat. Thomas de Turbevill Miles, Juratus & examinatus dicit, & in omnibus concordat cum Hugone de Turbevill, de Homagio, anno die & loco, & cæteris articulis; Hoc adjecto, quod vidit plures Wallenses venire cum prædicto Philippo, quorum nomina ignorat; & quod vidit prædictum Hugonem fratrem suum ibidem. Et Willelmus de Seyncler Miles, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod vidit & interfuit; & in omnibus concordat cum prædictis Hugone & Thoma; Hoc adjecto, quod dicit, quod idem Wallensis monstravit Regi quamdam cartam, per quam tenebatur facere domino Regi Homagium de terra prædicta. Dicit etiam, quod interfuerunt omnes prædicti Milites, & etiam Philippus le Bret, & Howell ap Meurick, qui venerunt cum prædicto Wallensi; Et adjecto etiam quod dicit, quod post Homagium factum hospitati fuerunt prædicti Philippus & Howell, & similiter prædictus Wallensis, secum ad domum suam de Cowerne &c. Et Willelmus Devereus Miles, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod non vidit neque interfuit, quando Homagium prædictum factum fuit, eo quod fuit in prisona, set bene audivit de Domino Rogero de Clifford, Hugone de Turbevill, & Ricardo de Bosco, qui ei narraverunt, quod fecit Homagium Domino Regi modo prædicto, apud Wigorniam, prædictis die & anno, de ten[ementis] prædictis. Et Philippus de Madleston Miles, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod bene scit, quod prædictum Homagium Bouloigne then being in the Kings hand, and one half of a Fee of the King in Chief [as of his Crown]. In this case it seemeth, that magium fuit factum Regi, set illud non vidit neque interfuit. Requir[itus] qualiter scit, Dicit quod contentio fuit inter Homines prædicti Wallensis & Homines Pagani de Chawrth, cui Dominus Rex custodiam Honoris de Bergeveny dederat, tenend[am] ad terminum quinque annorum, Ita quod ipse Wallensis venit pro pace habenda venit ad Castrum de Bergeveny, & dedit ei unum Leporarium, perfic quod faceret negotium suum prædicto Pagano Domino suo, cujus armiger fuit. Et ibidem in Castro illo monstravit cartam suam de terra prædicta, quam tenuit de Domino Rege; Et dixit, quod fuit Homo Regis, & in plena Curia monstravit cartam prædictam, per quam tenebatur Regi in Homagio; per quod prædictus Paganus districtiōnem, quam super eum prius fecit, remisit, tanquam homini Regis. Dicit etiam, quod Dominus Johannes de Hasting nuper tempore istius Regis cepit ipsum Wallensem. Qui quidem Wallensis mandavit Domino Regi pro deliberatione sua, tanquam Homo Domini Regis. Et super hoc, quia fuit Homo Regis deliberatus fuit per præceptum Regis. Et fuerunt nuncii de illa deliberatione, Ricardus de Bosco & Walterus Hakkeltle. De aliis articulis satis concordat, ut de auditu & fama patriæ. Et Willelmus de Timberlak, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod fuit in villa Wigornia cum Hugone de Turbervill Domino suo, de quo audivit quod prædictus Wallensis fecit Homagium; set ipse non interfuit. Audivit etiam de ore prædicti Wallensis, qui dixit ei, quod fecit Homagium Domino Regi pro terra prædicta. Et de captione & deliberatione prædicti Wallensis facta per J de Hasting, concordat cum prædicto Philippo & cum aliis in substantia. Et Petrus Clericus de terra de Breghinnok, Juratus & Examinatus dicit, quod fuit cum Roberto de Turbervill in Villa Wygornia. Et dicit, quod vidit & interfuit, & concordat in omnibus cum prædicto Hugone de Turbervill. Et Nicolaus de Chiltham de Comitatu Herefordiæ, dicit, quod non vidit neque interfuit, nec scivit, neque aliquid audivit, nisi infra istos duos annos proximo sequentes, & hoc de ore Rogeri Extranei & Ricardi de Bosco. Et Johannes Bras de Comitatu Herefordiæ & de ætate xl annorum, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod non interfuit nec vidit, set audivit de patre suo, & Avnculo suo, & aliis, qui fuerunt ad bellum de Evesham, Homagium prædictum factum fuisse, in prædicto Prioratu, prædictis die & anno. Et requir[itus] qualiter venit hic, dicit, quod per Dominum Bogonem de Clare. Et Arnaldus de Sancta Brigida de Comitatu Pennebrok, ætatis xlv annorum, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod Juor ap Gronogh & ipse fuerunt Socii in Castro de Drosan, Et sæpius locuti fuerunt de prædicto Wallen[si] Domino ipsius Juoris, quod prædictus Wallensis fuit Homo Regis de terra in prædicta carta contenta, & Homo J de Hasting tantum de tribus bovatis terræ, set non fuit neque interfuit Homagio prædicto. Et Johannes de Brokenhale de Comitatu Herefordiæ, & de ætate xxxvi annorum, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod non interfuit nec vidit, set dicit, quod Ranulphus pater suus, qui fuit cum Rege in Bello de Evesham, narravit ei, quod prædictus Wallensis fecit Homagium Domino Regi prædictis die anno & loco; Et illud idem audivit de Juor senescallo ipsius Wallensis. Et Rogerus that Robert de Scales or his Ancestour was not feoffed by ancient Feofment to hold in Baronial Homage, that is, by Barony. Therefore,

Rogerus Freman, de Comitatu Herefordiæ, ætate xxxvi annorum, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod Willelmus Freman pater suus, qui fuit Constabularius Castellri Herefordiæ, fuit in villa Wygornia, veniendo de Bello de Eveham, & narravit ei de Homagio prædicto, & concordat de substantia de dicto patris sui, hoc adjecto, quod fuit in guerra Walliæ, & hoc audivit de Wallensi & aliis sociis suis. Et Walterus Bras de Comitatu Herefordiæ, ætatis xxx annorum, Juratus & examinatus dicit, quod non interfuit neque vidit, sed audivit de Rogero de Clifford, cum quo fletit in servicio, quod fecit Homagium Domino Regi de terra prædicta, & hoc infra quatuor annos proximo præteritos; Et similiter audivit de Rogero le Estrange. Et Willelmus de la Roche de Westwallia, ætatis xxx annorum, Juratus & examinatus, dicit, quod non interfuit neque vidit, sed audivit de patre uxoris suæ, qui fuit ad Bellum de Eveham, & similiter de patre suo, quod Homagium prædictum factum fuit. Et in substantia concordat cum aliis de auditu. Et Willelmus Seym de Comitatu Herefordiæ, ætatis xxx annorum, Juratus & examinatus, dicit, quod non interfuit neque vidit, sed dicit, quod pater suus est de terra de Netherwent prope terram prædicti Wallensis, & ipse similiter; Et quod audivit de parentibus suis, qui sunt vicini, quod prædictus Wallensis fecit Homagium Regi de terra, &c. Et quod tota patria dixit in inicio litis, quod si placitum fuit per breve Regis in patria, quod Dominus Rex haberet custodiam, & homagium hæredis prædicti Wallensis; Et hæc fama regnavit per patriam. Dicit etiam, quod dictum est per patriam, quod quia Magister H de Bray Elicactor Regis, ratione cujus Johannes de Hasting, fratri ipsius Henrici dedit xl acras terræ Wallen[sis], per sic quod terra ipsius Wallen[sis] non caperetur in manum Regis. Et concordat de captione & liberatione prædicti J de Hasting, cum prædicto Philippo de Matlesden. Et Henricus Seym de Comitatu Herefordiæ, qui est ætatis circa xxx ann[orum], Juratus & examinatus, dicit, quod non interfuit nec vidit, sed audivit de Domino Hugone de Turbevill & aliis, quod hoc est vulgare in patria. Et concordat cum aliis, qui sciunt per auditum & famam patriæ. Et Johannes de Ewereus de Comitatu Herefordiæ, ætatis xli annorum, Juratus & examinatus, dicit, quod ipse Wallensis, & pater suus fuerunt parentes; Et ipse venit sapius cum patre in domo prædicti Wallensis, & audivit ibidem & alibi, quod fecit Homagium Domino Regi pro terra prædicta. Dicit tamen, quod idem Wallensis tenuit de Johanne de Hasting, quasdam terras in Wallia, scilicet tres bovatas terræ. Dicit, etiam quod bene intelligit, quod prædictus Wallensis tenuit de Domino Rege &c. quia dicit, quod antecessores illius Wallensis aliquo tempore forisfecerunt prædictas terras suas in Wallia. Et Dominus J Rex postea refoffavit eum de dicta terra, de eo tenend[a] per Homagium &c. sicut carta loquitur. Et concordat de captione J de Hasting, & deliberatione, cum prædicto Philippo &c.

Postea, quia adhuc nescitur utrum ostensio prædictæ Cartæ, & probatio prædicta satis operantur ad jus ipsius Regis declarand[um], ex habundanti dictum est Willelmo Inge, qui sequitur pro Rege, quod sequatur breve ad faci-

Postea a die S Michaelis in tres septimanas, anno regni Regis nunc decimo octavo, venerunt Simon de la Bere Miles, Henricus de Hereford Miles, Walterus de Roubury, Thomas la Wafre, Thomas Wydye, Henricus de Lude, de Comitatu Herefordiæ, & Simon de Crombe, Radulphus de Littleton, Johannes de Muscegros, Ricardus de Petheleg[a], Willelmus le Joven[ce], & Walterus de Cateshull de Comitatu Wygornia, xii Jur[atores]; Qui dicunt super sacramentum suum, quod Honor de Breghinowe, cum homagiis, serviciis, redditibus & aliis pertinentiis suis, devenit in manum Domini J Regis, avi Domini Regis nunc; Et quod Philippus filius Wastellionis fecit Homagium prædicto Domino J Regi, pro terra de Donewaldeſland, tempore, quo dictus Honor fuit in manibus prædicti J Regis. Et dicunt, quod prædictus J Rex, Honorem prædictum cum homagiis prædictis, adeo libere, sicut & cum tenuit, reddidit cuidam Egidio de Breause, antecessori prædictorum Johannis, & Milisenta. Et dicunt, quod semper post redditionem prædictam, prædictus J de Hasting, & antecessores sui fuerunt in seſina de Homagio prædicti Philippi filii Meurici, & antecessorum suorum, pro prædicta terra de Donewaldeſland. Et dicunt quod non possunt inquirere, quod Philippus filius Meurici, nec aliquis antecessorum suorum, unquam fecit Homagium Domino II Regi, patri Regis nunc, pro prædicta terra de Donewaldeſland, post redditionem (it is written so in the Roll) quam prædictus Dominus J Rex fecit prædicto Egidio. Et quia convictum est per prædictam Jur[atam], quod prædictus Johannes de Hasting, non se intrusit in terram prædictam, Conf[ideratum] est, quod prædicti Johannes & Milisenta ad præfens eant inde sine die. Thus there was a considerable difference in this respect between Tenancy ut de Corona and Tenancy ut de Honore. This difference was grounded on the ancient Law and Custome of the Realm: And is mentioned and approved by the great Charters of K K John and Henry III. The Clause in the great Charter of K John runs

tres of K K
John & H 3.

thus, “ If a man holdeth of any Escheat as of the Honor of Walingford, Notingham, Boloigne, Lancaster, or other Escheats “ which are in our hand, and are Baronies, and dyeth, his heir “ shall not give us any other Relief, or do to us any other service than he should pay or do to the Baron, if the Barony was in the Barons hand, and we will hold it [the said Escheat] in the same manner as the Baron held it (u)”. The Clause in the great Charter of K Henry III runs thus, “ If “ a man holdeth of any Escheat, for example of the Honor of Walingford, Boloigne, Notingham, Lancaster, or any other Escheats “ which are in our hand, provided they are Baronies, and dyeth, “ his heir shall not give us any other Relief, nor do to us any other Service, than he should do to the Barony, if the Escheat “ was in the hand of the Baron. And we will hold such Escheat “ in the same manner as the Baron held it (x).

There might be other differences which I do not at present recollect, between a Tenant in Capite holding by Chivalry ut de Corona, and one so holding ut de Honore.

ëta, sicut de Honore Walingfordiæ, Boloniæ, Nottinghamiæ, Lancastriæ, vel aliis escaëtis, quæ sunt in manu nostra, & sunt Baronie, & obierit, hæres ejus non det aliud relevium, nec faciat nobis aliud servitium, quam faceret Baroni, si illa esset in manu Baronis; & nos eodem modo eam tenebimus, quo Baro eam tenuit; nec nos occasione talis Baronie vel Escaëtæ, habebimus aliquam escaëtam vel custodiam aliquorum nostrorum hominum, nisi de nobis alibi tenuerit in Capite ille qui tenuerit Baroniam vel Escaetam. Magna Charta Regis Hen. III, data 11^o Febr. anno regni nono, Inspecta & confirmata ab Edw. I. Hanc clausulam desumfi ex Diplomate

But if a Fee holden of the Crown in Capite escheated to the King, and was not an Honor or Barony, then such Fee did not (that is to say, I think it did not) vest in the Crown in the same plight as it was vested in the late Tenant in Capite.

The Lord Marleburghs Position weighed.

IN the Year 1642. a small Posthumous Treatise in duodecimo was published in the name of James Earl of Marleburgh late Lord-Treasurer of England. In that Treatise the Author saith, "Tenure in Capite by Knights service is, properly, where lands "are holden of the person of the King and of his Crowne, as of "a feigniory itself in grosse; and chiefe above all feigniories; "Improperly of him as of some ancient Honour annexed to the "Crowne, as Barkhamstead, Boloigne, Raleigh, Albemarle, &c. "And this description is understood as well of Knights service, "as Soccage in capite (y).

Here My Lord Marleburgh would have spoken right, if he had said, Tenure in Capite by Knights Service is, Primarily, where lands holden of the King ut de Corona, as of his Crown; Secondly, where lands are holden of him as of some ancient Honour annexed to his Crown. But I am not afraid to say, that My Lord Marleburgh is wrong in supposing that the Later is improperly called Tenure in Capite. For in the ancient times when men understood Tenures best, and spoke most accurately about them, they constantly called Tenure of the King ut de Honore, Baronia, Castro, a Tenure in Capite. They called it Tenure in Capite from age to age, for four or five hundred years together, as appeareth from the instances produced above in this chapter. And it is very likely they did not speak improperly for so many ages together.

As to what the Learned Author just above cited saith in a paragraph hereunder referred-to (z); That paragraph seemeth to be so complicated and confused, that I must not offer to reduce or rectify it. There are several other things in that little Treatise which I choofe to pafs-over in filence.

For the Tenure ut de Corona was the Primary Tenure in Capite. So that when a man is faid in general terms to hold of the King in Capite, it was understood that he held of the King ut de Corona, unlefs it was expreffed to be otherwise, that is unlefs it was added, that he held of the King in Capite, ut de Honore, Baroniam, Caftro.

But it feemeth plain, that both the former and the later are Properly called Tenure in Capite: that is to fay, the Former is Principal or Primary Tenure in Capite, the Later lefs-principal or Secondary.

Montmirail.

WHAT hath been faid in the foregoing part of this Difquifition may be applied to the Cafe relating to the Barony or Seignury of Montmirail in France; which Cafe was argued in the Council of State at Paris in the year 1668 (a). In the arguments upon that Cafe feveral things are hinted which afford matter for a great deal of difcourfe. Amongft other things it was faid by the Counfel at Bar, that to hold of the great Tower of Louvre was the fame in meaning, as to hold of the Crown of France. They fpeak thus. “The terms, of the great “Tower or Caftle of Louvre, and, of the Crown of France, are “fynonymous. So that the Mouvance of the Seignury of Mont“mirail having been affigned to the great Tower of Louvre, the “faid Seignury hath been made a Fee moving barely from the “Crown. And again. The terms, of the Caftle of Louvre, of “the Crown, and, of the great Tower of Louvre, are fynony- “mous, that is to fay, that every Fee the mouvance whereof is “affigned to the great Tower of Louvre doth relieve immedi- “ately of the Crown; and reciprocally, that thofe Fees which “are holden fine medio of the Crown, have the Caftle or great “Tower of Louvre for the Chief-place of their Mouvance (b).

But

(a) Journal du Palais, Tom. 1. p. 38 & feqq. Printed at Paris A D 1713.

(b) Ces termes, groffe Tour de Louvre, Chafteau de Louvre, & Couronne, font fynonymes, & par confequent la mouvance

But let this matter be considered. If I do not mistake, the state of the Fact in relation to the Tower or Castle of the Louvre was this. Hugh Capet the younger was Earl of Paris and Constable of France. As Earl of Paris he was seized of the Honor or Comté of Paris. Of this Land-Honor or great Barony of Paris the Castle or Tower of the Louvre was the Head, the Capital Seat, or Caput Honoris.

He held the Comté of Paris of the Crown of France, immediately, sans moyenne, in Baronial Homage. Being thus seized of the Comté of Paris, he mounted the Throne of France. By his accession to the Throne, the Comté of Paris was reunited to the Crown of France, and continueth so united to this day.

This was the case in point of Fact. Hereupon it may be said, if the Fief of Montmirail was ab antiquo holden of the King of France ut de Corona, or, in other Words relieved of the King as of the Original Demeane or Inheritance of the Crown, then it was not originally holden of the King as of the Castle of Louvre. For the Castle or Tower of the Louvre, or the Comté de Paris, were not compleatly vested in the Crown of France, in Seigneurage, Domaine, and Service, till Hugh Capet obtained seisine of the Throne.

If the Fief of Montmirail was holden of the Earl of Paris in ancient time, before Hugh Capets accession to the Throne, then by and after the reunion of the Comté of Paris to the Crown, this Seigneurie came to be holden of the King of France, not ut de Corona, but (as we speak in England) ut de Honore, to wit as of the Honour or Comté of Paris, or par occasion du Compté de Paris, or, in other words which bear the same meaning, ut de Castro Luparæ, as of the Castle or Tour of the Louvre.

For illustration, let the case of the Comté of Paris in France be que tout fief, dont la mouvance est assignée a la grosse Tour du Louvre relève immediatement de la Couronne, & que reciproquement ceux, qui sont tenus sans moyen de la Couronne, ont pour chef-lieu de leur mouvance superieure le Chasteau ou la grosse Tour du Louvre. Ibid. p 69. col. 1.

be compared with the case of the Honor of Gloucester in England.

K Henry II was seised of the Honor of Gloucester in right of his Crown, as his Escheat (c). He died so seised. Upon his death the said Honour descended, together with the Crown of England, to K Richard I, his Son and Heir. K Richard I, being seised of the said Honour in Fee, feft his Brother John Earl of Moreton thereof in Fee (d). By that Fefment, Earl John was seised of the said Honor in Fee, and held it of K Richard I, by Baronial Homage and Service. In the reign of the same K Richard I, Earl John, by Judgment of the King's Court, was disseised of all his Lands in England (e). But by mediation of Alienore the Queen Dowager, Mother of K Richard I and of Earl John, K Richard was reconciled to his Brother John (f). Afterwards, Earl John's Honors and Manors were restored to him by K Richard; whereby he the said Earl John became resealed of them as in his former estate. Thus Earl John, at the time of the Death of K Richard I, was seised of the Honor of Gloucester in Fee, holden in Baronial Homage. And he being so seised, the Crown of England, upon the Death of K Richard I, descended to the said John Earl of Moreton, as K Richard's Brother and heir. By this Descent of the Crown, the Honor of Gloucester was reunited to the Crown, and vested in it as an Honor. By that Reunion K John was seised of the Honor of Gloucester in Pure Seignourage and in Demeane. His Baronial Homage ceased. The Seignourage and Demeane of the Honor remained united to the Crown. But the Baronial Service was extinguished. For it would be absurd and repugnant to say or suppose that the Sovereign, K John, could do the Service incumbent upon the Earl of Gloucester deceased, or that he could could do Service to himself. For this reason, I say, the Baronial Service was extinguished in the Person of K. John. Nevertheless, all the Chevalerian Tenants of the Honor straitway held their respective Fees of K. John, in Capite ut de Honore Gloucestrie, in chief as of the Honor of Gloucester.

It is to be remembred, that when K. John was thus seised of the Crown and of the Honor of Gloucester, the Honor was not immersed in the Crown. It rested in the Crown Distinct, in such manner and plight as an Honor or Barony was wont to rest. For though K. John took his first seisin of it by Fesment, as hath been said above; yet in regard it was in its nature an Honor; when it became united to the Crown, it remained vested in K. John in like manner as the Honors of Walingford, Lancaster, and other Honors were vested. If it had been a Single Knights Fee or a Manour in Demeane, it would have been merged in the Crown. But the Law and Custome of England was otherwise in relation to Baronies, as hath been before observed.

This case of the Honor of Gloucester in England seemeth to be the same in substance with the case of the Honor or Comté of Paris in France; and wanteth as I apprehend, no further explanation.

On the other part. If the Fief of Montmirail was not ab antiquo holden of the Earl of Paris for the time being, or (in other words) did not relieve of the Honor or Comté of Paris, then, I do humbly apprehend it was not natural and fuitable to ancient practice to limit or annex the Tenure of it to the Castle or Tour of the Louvre. Nevertheless, if the Fief of Montmirail was part of the Ancient Domaine, Ancient or Modern Escheat or Purchase of the King of France, then, if King Louis XIV thought fit to erect it de novo into a Barony, He might limit the Tenure of it in such manner as he pleased, namely, to hold of the King and his heirs in general terms, or of the King and his heirs as of the Tour of the Louvre.

In the Arguments upon this case, Montmirail is styled a Barony. But it must be remembred, that if it relieved immediately of the Earl of Paris, it was but nominally a Barony; for it could not be properly a Barony, unless it relieved immediately of the Crown.

One

One thing more may be remembred. When we say a man holdeth of a Castle or Tower, it is to be understood, that we use those terms for brevity's sake. For properly a Tenant or Feudatary cannot hold of a Tower or any other inanimate thing. For in all Holding there is Lord and Tenant. A Castle or Tower cannot be a Lord; nor can a Tenant do Homage to a Tower, and say, I become your man, &c. So that when we say, a man holdeth of a Tower or Castle, it is meant both in England and in France, that he holdeth of the King as of such Tower or Castle [then being in the Kings seifine], or, that he holdeth of such a Baron, in whose seifine or whole Baronial Seat such Tower or Castle is. In like manner, if we say that a man holdeth of the Crown, it is a common and well-known Metonymy, signifying that he holdeth of the King for the time being, or, of the King in perpetual Succession.

I ask pardon of the learned Antecessours and Jurists of France, for having spoken so freely upon this subject. I am sensible it is easy for an Englishman to mistake, when he writeth about the Laws or Customes of France; and for a Frenchman, when he writeth about the Laws or Customes of Great Britain. But in regard there was (if I have observed right) in former ages, a great agreement between the feudal customes of England and those of France in relation to Baronage, I have ventured to speak the more copiously upon this case of Montmirail.

In the next foregoing Sections I have endeavoured to shew what Tenure in Capite was. And in the progress of my discourse I have explained and illustrated that Tenure, in such a manner as was never done before, for ought that I know. All that I had read in Books about Tenure in Capite, served rather to puzzle than instruct or explain. However, in studying the Records, I found several precedents, which seemed to give some light; especially the cases of Robert de Bracy, Baldewin de Frevill, and John de Craft.

Robert de Bracy held land of William de Bracy in Capite, William de Bracy of William de Beauchamp, and William de Beauchamp of the Bishop of Worcester in Capite (g). In the thirty-eight eighth year of K. Henry III, Baldewin de Frivill alleged, that he did not hold in Capite of the King, but of Alexander de Abetot, and Alexander of William de Beauchamp, and William of the Bishop of Worcester, and the Bishop of the King in Capite (b). In the twentyseventh year of K. Henry III, it is said in a Record, that John Craft was not the Kings Bailif in Capite, immediate Bailif, but put into that office by Almarac de St Amand Sherif of Herefordshire (i). In the two and twentieth year of K. Henry III, the Sherif of Essex and Hertfordshire was commanded by the Kings writ, to enter into certain Free hundreds in his bailywick, and distrain in Capite, that is, immediately, or by his own hand, without making any precept to the bailifs of those hundreds, to empower them to distrain (k). At length the case of Robert de Tudenham and Eve his wife occurred to me. From thence I first received Light or distinct knowledge upon this subject. In that Case William de Ereswell pleadeth, “that the Manour of Ereswell was holden of “the King in Capite as of the Honor of Boloigne, and that several “persons successively one after another held the same of the King “in Capite, and successively dyed in the Kings Homage, &c; “Wherefore he saith, that the said Manour is holden of the “King immediately”. That Case is published at large in my History of the Exchequer (l). From this Case it appeareth plainly, that to hold in Capite and to hold immediately were synonymous. I took this Hint. And several times afterwards I brought it to the Touchstone; always with satisfaction.

(g) Hist. Exch. p 415. col. 2. c.

Feuda adspectant Regem.

ALL Knights fees looked towards the Sovereign, that is, the King. If they were holden at a great distance from the Sovereign, Sovereign, they had a tendency to him. For Tenancy in Chivalry was originally created by him, and Chivalerian Service was to be performed to him, either mediately or immediately, [to wit, either in his Army or in his Castles]. For instance. When the Knight-service was performed in the Kings Army or in his Castle by one of the Kings immediate Tenants: Then, no doubt, it was performed to the King. So also, when the Knight-service was performed in the Kings Army by a Knight who held of some Baron: Then, it might also be said to be performed to the King, as it was performed or done by a Knight who relieved of a Baron, which Baron relieved immediately of the King, and was answerable to the King for that Service, and in fact performed that Service to the King, by the said Knight. In like manner, when Knight-service was done in the Castle of a Lord or Baron; then it was also done to the King mediately; it being done to a Baron who relieved of the King, and who was answerable to him for that quantity of Service.

Retrofeudi, Arrierfiefs.

IN digesting or placing of Feudal Tenancies, there seemeth to have been an allusion to the method then used in Ranking of Soldiers, under their General and his Subaltern Officers. For example. There were Fees holden in Capite of the King; and likewise Fees holden of the Person holding of the King in Capite; and also Fees holden of such Person who perchance feoffed others under him, and so onward. These Fees holden at a great distance from the chief Lord were called in Foreign Countries, Retrofeuda. In Italy they called them Retrofeudi, in France, Arrierfiefs.

But in regard the terms Retrofeudum or Arrierfief were little or not at all used in England, I shall take no further notice of them here. Thus, I say, the Tenants in Capite may be likened to the Front of an Army or Squadron, and the Tenants holding at a Distance under them, may be likened to the Rere.

CHAPTER III.

Deviation from the Feudal Rule.

UT in some cases, men have deviated from the ancient Feudal Law. For example. When Feudal Seigneries came to be vested in Abbies and Houses of Religion, being aggregate Bodies of men; or when their Lands were charged in their seifine with Feudal or Military Services or Duties; this was a Deviation from the natural and proper state of Feuds. Wherefore, to reduce aswell the Seniurage as the Tenure in these cases, as near as might be, to the old course or state of Feuds, the Abbot was wont to stand in the place of his House; that is to say, on the one part the Seniurage was lodged in the Abbot, by virtue whereof he used to receive the Homage of his Men or Homagial Tenants; and on the other part, the Tenancy was also lodged in the Abbot, by reason whereof he was wont to do homage for his Barony or Knights Fees, either to the Crown, or to some other Lord to whom he was Homagial. This Receiving of Homage and doing of Homage, was respectively in the name both of the Abbot and his House. But the nature of these several Acts required that they should be done by a single person. For the same reason, the Abbot might be and often was a great Lord or Baron; when the Monks of his House were onely simple plain men. For in Feudal cases, the Abbot represented his whole House; and being a single person he was adapted so to do.

In England, when an Abbot did Homage to his Lord being a Subject, he did it in this Form. “I do homage unto you, and “to you will be faithful and true, and faith to you will bear, “for the tenements which I hold of you; saving the faith which “I owe unto our Lord the King (m).

What hath been said of an Abbot may also be said of a Priour who was Head of an House.

Cujacius

(m) Littletons Tenures sect. 86.

“Cujacius saith, he is a Convaſſall, who holdeth a Feud of the ſame Lord, or of the ſame Houſe” (n). The phraſe, to hold of a particular Lord gives us the neat original notion of Feudal Tenure: The phraſe, to hold of a Houſe, (ſuppoſe of an Abbey) ſhews us the Deviation from the Neat original notion. And therefore I think Cujacius ſhould firſt have laid before his Reader the Neat original idea of Feudal Tenure; and then have ſet-down the ſaid Deviation from it.

Moreover, in the Roman-germanick Empire, another great Deviation from the ancient Rule or Courſe of Feuds hath been brought-in by Time. There, they ſpeak of holding Baronies and other Feuds or Feés, of the Emperour and Roman Empire. Let it be conſidered how this is to be interpreted. The phraſe, Roman Empire comprehendeth as well the Princes and Great Lords holding Feuds, as alſo the lower Eſtates or Orders of men; ſuppoſe, the Tenants of Arrierſiefs, the Peaſants, and Burgeſſes of Towns. Where ſhall men in this caſe fix the Seniurage. It ſeemeth improper and againſt the nature of Feuds, to fix the Seignourage, of the Empire, either wholly or in Part, in the collective Body of the Empire. For Example. If the Princes and Great Lords of the Empire are to do Homage to the Emperour and Empire jointly; and in conſequence, are to hold in vaſallage of the Emperour and Empire jointly; to wit, of the Head and of the higher Middle and lower orders of the Empire jointly: This, as it ſeemeth, would be to turn the Empire upſide-down. The Community or Collective-body of the Empire, or a great part of them, are incapable of having Seignourage, and of receiving Homage; becauſe they are, by courſe of nature, placed in a ſtate of Subjection, a ſtate oppoſite to Lordſhip or Seignourage. And it ſeemeth to be improper and unfeudal, to lodge the Sovereignty or High Seignourage of the Empire, even in Part, in the middle or low eſtates of the Empire, to wit, in the Tenants of Arrierſiefs, or the Bourgeoiſie, and Peaſantric. And as to the great Lords of the Empire, when any of them do homage to the Emperour and Empire jointly, then they virtually do Homage to themſelves, and and hold of themselves; they being a Part of the Collective Body of the Empire.

The Emperour for the time being, and the Estates of the Empire duly assembled have power to limit as they please, as well the Seignourage of the Sovereign the Emperour, as also the Homage and Service of the Vassals both greater and smaller of the Empire. Here, two things fall under consideration. First, If the Emperour and the Estates of the Empire should at any time hereafter transfer the Liege Seignourage, even in part, from the Emperour to the Collective Body of the Empire; by that means, Seignourage and Vassalage, or Sovereignty and Subjection, in the Empire, will be blended in some measure. For Seignourage and Vassalage cannot be fixed in the same persons at the same time, without some degree of solœcism or repugnancy.

In the Second place; If they should at any time hereafter reduce the Liege Seignourage to an Empty name, What will become of the Rights, Perogatives and Regalia belonging to the said Liege Seignourage, that is, to the Imperial Dignity? In what subjectum or visible Person will they subsist: or will they together with the Seignourage become an Empty Name?

What I have here spoken concerning the Roman-germanick Empire, hath been spoken chiefly to illustrate my subject by Foreign as well as Domestick instances.

But in regard the Form of that Empire is Irregular, Mixed, and Complicated, as James-Charles Spener (o), Philip-Andrew de Burgold (p), and others, have observed, I forbear to enlarge.

After the like manner, when men have been said to hold Fiefs of the Roman Church; It appeareth to be a Deviation from the usual course of Fiefs; unless it be explained. In such case, it was not, I conceive, to be understood, that men held their Fiefs of the Diffusive Body of the Roman Church, spread over Europe; That would be uncertain and vagous. Again, it was not, probably, to be understood, that they held their Fiefs of the Pope and his Chapter the Parish-Priests and Deacons of Rome (commonly monly called the College of Cardinals, or the Sacred College) jointly with the Pope. But in this case, if we suppose the Seignourage to be vested in the Pope of Rome for the time being or in perpetual succession; in regard the Pope is deemed by his Subjects to be the Head of the Roman Church, and as such representeth the whole Body of that Church, to wit, in point of Feudal Seignourage: Then, I say, upon the foot of that supposition, we are enabled to return, from the said Deviation, to the regular course of Fiefs or Feudal Tenure.

(o) Speneri Hist. Germ. Universal. Tom. 2. L. 3. ca. 5. &c.

The Baronial Abbots of England were in like case. These Abbots were great Lords; and the Monks of their House were deemed to be in the state of Dead men, divested of all property. The Seignourage was vested in the Lord Abbot. He was to do Homage to the King, as the Kings immediate Tenant: and the Abbots feudal Tenants were to do Homage to him as their immediate Lord. This, I think, was the ancient state of the Abbeys in respect of seignourage. But then, if the seignourage came to be in any degree vested in the Convent; that made a Deviation from the ancient and most regular course of Fiefs or Fees: Which Deviation nevertheless would be removed, and the regular course of Fees restored, as soon as the seignourage was re-vested in the Abbot.

These or other Deviations, when confirmed and established by Time, may become the Usage and Law of the Countrey wherein they are admitted. It is not my design to oppose or disparage the Law or Custom of any Kingdom or Countrey. I have mentioned these Deviations chiefly for this end, namely, to give the Student of Laws a clearer notion of Feudal Lordship and Tenancy, by laying before him as well the Regular Course of Fiefs, as also the Deviations.

Fines for alleging wrong Tenure.

IF a man alleged or avowed wrong Tenure, in order to deceive or injure the King, he was to be fined or amerced.

In the reign of K Henry II, Humfrey Malkael alleged that he held the Land of Grossfebi of another Lord, when in truth he held held it of the King. He was fined for it. And Robert son of Peter was fined for the same offence (q).

Sir Thomas Craig's Notion.

SIR Thomas Craig of famous memory, saith, Kingdoms are not Feuds or Fees (r). And what he saith is true, if it be rightly explained and stated. A King who is independent, and hath no Superiour on earth, is not a Vassal or Feudatary. The Terra or Dominion of an independent King is not a Feud or Fief. For it is not holden of any Lord, or subjected to any Homage and Service. And a Feud or Fief, in the very nature of it, subsisteth in Homage and Service: Which things are inconsistent with Sovereignty and Independency. Thus the King of England is an Imperial and independent King. And in like manner, the King of France is an imperial and independent King. I forbear adding instances of other Independent Kings: These two may suffice. On the other side, since the Feudal Customs have taken place amongst Nations, there have been Dependent and Subordinate Kings. These were Kings in Vassallage; and their Kingdoms were Fiefs; holden of their High Lord by Homage and Service, or perchance by Homage onely. In this there is not any absurdity. A man adorned with the Title of a King may be a Vassal, as well as a man adorned with the Title of Earl, Marquis or Duke.

In this case, the Fief remained in the same state, though the style or Denomination of it was altered, to wit, from an Earldom or Duchy to a Kingdom.

If a Feudatary of the Emperour, suppose an Archidapifer, an Archimarescallus, or other, was an Earl; it was in the Power and Will of the Emperour to create such Feudatary a Marquis or Duke; it was furthermore in the power and Will of the Emperour to create him a King. Sir Thomas Craig knew well, that Kings have been created; that a Marquis or Duke hath been created a King by his Sovereign or Superiour Lord.

Ludovicus Pius King of France and Emperour made his Sons Kings; Lotaire King of Italy, Pipin of Aquitany, Louis of the Norici (s).

Paulo Emilio saith, that Charles the Bald, Emperour, created not onely Dukes but Kings also (t). To shew his Power in creating Kings, he made Boso, brother to his wife Judith, King of Provence (u). In the year of Christ 1130, Pope Anacletus (he was an Antipope), "by his Bull dated at Benevento, granted to Roger, "Guiscard III, Earl of Sicily and Calabria, and Duke of Apulia," the Crown and Royal Dignity of Sicily Calabria and Apulia;" "To hold to him and his heirs; and constituted Sicily, the caput "Regni;" Roger and his heirs were appointed by this Bull, to do "Homage and Fealty to the Pope and his Successours, and to "pay to the Roman Church yearly six hundred schiffate (w)". In the year 1382, Pope Clement VII by his Bulled Letter, created several Lands in Italy into a Kingdom, by the name of Regnum Adriæ, the Kingdom of Adria. These Lands were part of the Lands in Italy, which belonged to the Pope and the Roman Church, terras nostras & Ecclesiæ Romanæ, quas habemus in Italia, to wit, the Marchia Anconitana, Romandiola, Ducatus Spoletani, and other Lands, Cities, and Territories. Of this Kingdom he made Lewis Duke of Anjou King. And amongst many clauses contained in this Bull, the Pope directeth in what manner and in what Words the King of Adria shall do Homage or Liege Vassallage to the Roman Church, and likewise directeth the tenour of the Oath of Fealty, which the said King shall take (x). We may add, that Homagial Kings have been created even within this last century. But though Kingdoms are not Feuds or Fiefs; yet by the law and custom of Nations, they imitate Fiefs, as well in in point of Descent, as also in several other respects. If an Earldom or Duchy was erected into a Kingdom: Still such Kingdom was of the nature of an Honor or Barony. So the Kingdom of Jerusalem was deemed by the Feudists to be a Barony (y). However, in this case Sir Thomas Craigs position may soon be set-right. As if he had said. An Independent King cannot leave his Crown to his Second Son, in disherison of his Eldest Son. For though Independent Kingdoms are not Fiefs or Feuds: yet by the Law and Custom of the polite Nations in Europe, they Descend from Father to Son, and from Ancestour to heir, in the same course or manner as Feudal Seigneuries are wont to Descend.

staken, the subject of Efcuage explained in a more clear and solid manner, from authentick testimonies, in another Book (b).

Littleton of Knight-service.

SIRE Thomas Littleton of Famous memory in his book of Tenures, hath a Chapter entituled Efcuage, confisting of eight sections (c). In that chapter he calls Efcuage a Tenure; and confounds it with Knight-service, and with Homage and Fealty. “He that holdeth (saith he) by Efcuage, holdeth by Knight-service. “Efcuage non-certain is Knight-service. Tenure by Homage, Fealty and Efcuage is Tenure by Knight-service (d). Whereas Efcuage was not properly a Tenure; as hath been hinted elsewhere (e). It was indeed appendent to Knight-service; and was one of the Duties or Friuts of Knight-service; but it was not ipsum servitium militare, Knight-service it self. So also Homage and Fealty were appendent to Knight-service, and were acts which every man holding by that Tenure was bound to do; but they were not the Tenure of Knight-service it self. Rendring of Relief was a Duty appendent to Knight-service; but was not Knight-service; Aid-render was also a Duty appendent to Knight-service; but it could not properly be called Knight-service, or Tenure by Aid.

Salvo Regali servicio, viz. Scutagio.

IN Fefments or Deeds of Grant, it was usual in the Reddendo, to except the Regale servitium, the Kings service.

By the Kings service so excepted they generally understood Efcuage due to the King. By Efcuage was meant Efcuage-money at

CHAPTER IV.

Nciently there were two general ways of holding land, which were wont to be contradistinguished from one another, to wit, holding in dominio or dominico, in demeane; and in servitio, in service. Every Military Fee was holden in servitio: It was essential to a Military Fee to be so holden.

In Feuds or Military Fees, the Service was so considerable, that a Fee was in a sort deemed to consist in Service. Infomuch that in some cases, when a man granted or released the Service of a Military Fee, by the words Servitium feodi unius Militis or the like, he thereby granted or released the Fee it self.

K Henry II granted to Ranulf de Glanvill certain land of the yearly value of lxs by tail, being lately parcell of the Service of William Fitz-hervey, that is, of the land holden in servitio by the said William (k).

In the second year of K John, Walter Croc released to the King and his heirs the Moiety of the Barony which was his Uncle Walter Brittons by the name of Servitium medietatis Baronie, to the end the King would be pleased to seff Richard Briewerre thereof; to wit, in Fees, in Knights, in Services, in advoufons of Churches, and in all Liberties pertaining to the said Moiety, to hold to Richard and his heirs of the King and his heirs in Capite (l)

In old time Lands were sometimes granted, conveyed or released by the words, Homagium, Servitium, Tenura.

Rot. 2 Job. Rot. 7. a. Dorsete & Sumerfete.*

I said just now, that sometimes by the term Servitium the Land it self was granted or conveyed; it is also manifest by precedents, that Land was also sometimes granted or conveyed by the terms Tenura, Tenatura, or the like Words signifying Tenure (m).

K Stephen by his Charter confirmed to the Canons of Saint Martin in London, all their Lands and Possessions, by the terms terras & omnes alias tenuras suas (n).

The same K Stephen by a Writ under his great Seal commanded Geoffrey de Magnavilla, then Sherif of London and Middlesex to put the Canons of S Martin in London into saisine of their lands and rights of Meldona, by the terms of terris & omnibus tenaturis suis de Meldona (o).

The Statutes about Tenure in Capite.

BY a Statute made in the thirtyfifth year of K Henry VIII, it is enacted, that when the King granted out any Manors, Lands, &c. which came to the Crown by Dissolution of the Religious Houses, and did not exceed the clear yearly value of xls, he might in his Patent Letters of grant, reserve at his pleasure, either a Tenure by Knights service in Capite, or else a tenure in socage or free burgage and not in Capite, with a yearly Rent or tenth of such lands granted (r).

In the thirtyseventh year of K Henry VIII, it is enacted, that all Lands, tenements, &c. not above the clear yearly value of xls, by whatsoever title they came to the Kings hands, which had passed from the King by any grant made thereof since the twenty-fourth day of April, in the seven and twentieth year of his reign, and were limited to be holden of the King his heirs and successors by by fealty onely and not in Capite, or in focage or free burgage, or by fealty onely in free and common focage and not in Capite, or by any fuch like words, or to be holden by fealty as of any of the Kings Honours, Manors or lands, or by fealty onely as of any of the Kings Honours, Manors or Lands and not in Capite, or by any fuch like words: that the fame fhall be deemed to be holden in focage or burgage and not in Capite, and fhall in no wife be deemed or taken to be holden in Capite. Section 2.

And that during five years to come, the King may upon his Grants referve a tenure by Knight-service in Capite, or elfe a tenure by fealty or in focage or burgage and not in Capite. And that all fuch general tenures made and referved fince the thirty fifth year of the King, and hereafter to be made and referved within thefe five years, in and by Grants or Patent-letters having thefe Words & non in Capite, fhall be deemed tenures in focage or burgage, and not tenures in Capite. Se&tilde. 3.

And that where Patents are made of Lands, with the words, & non in Capite, the Patentees fhall hold by the fervice of fealty in focage or burgage, and fhall not hold the fame of the King in Chief or in Capite, nor fhall be compelled to fue any livery, make fine for alienation, or fue any licence or pardon for alienation, and the heir may enter without fuing of livery, oufterlemaine, &c. Se&tilde. 4 (s).

In the firft year of K Edward VI, to prevent and take away doubts that had arifen and that might arife about tenure of Lands, another Statute is made, whereby it is enacted, that all Honours, Caftles, Manours, Lands, &c. which are holden of the King by any of his Subjects by Knight-fervice, focage, or otherwise, as of any of his Dukedomes, Earldoms, Baronies, Caftles, Manours, &c. which become, or which fhall hereafter come to the Crown by means of any attainder or conviction, or by diffolution or Surrender of any Religious Houfes, fhall not from hencefourth be adjudged to be holden in Capite or as tenure in Capite. Section 1. Provided that this A˜ fhall not be hurtful to the King, for or concerning any wardfhip, livery, primer feifin, &c. or any profit which is or may come to him from any perfon holding any Honours, feignories, caftles, manors, lands, &c. of the King in Chief as of his person, or of any other his ancient possessions, and being not come to the King by any such Attainder, Dissolution, Surrender as aforesaid. sect. 2. And provided, that this act shall not give any advantage or profit to any Tenant in Fee simple of any Honors, Manours, lands or tenements, which have heretofore sued any special or general livery or ouster le main, of any Honors, Manors, &c. by what tenure or service soever they were holden, or who shall confess by matter of Record any tenure in Chief of the King; but that he or they shall hold in like manner as they did before the making of this Statute (t).

In the Statute of the thirtyseventh year of K Henry VIII, and in the Statute of the first year of K Edward VI, it is recited, that divers questions and doubts had lately arisen [amongst the Professours of the Common-law], concerning the tenure of certain Lands and Revenues mentioned in the same Statutes. But if things had been duly weighed, perhaps it might have been found that those questions and doubts were in great measure needless, and onely owing to the subtilizing which had been introduced in Westminster-hall. In some cases when a Seignury came to the Crown by Escheat or otherwise, the Knights Fees holding of such Seignury continued to be holden by the same Tenure, or in the same Plight as they were holden before they came to the Crown. This was a thing known in Westminster-hall. Perhaps that might give occasion to Lawyers to raise the aforesaid Doubts. In particular, because in some cases Knights Fees were holden by the same Tenure after the Seignury was vested in the Crown, by which they were holden before, some persons might conclude they were to be so holden in all cases.

But that opinion was groundless, as may appear from what I have said above.

On the other part, there was reason to make a Doubt in the case following. That is to say. Several of the Abbots and Priours were Barones Regis, the Kings Barons, and held their Temporalties of the King by Barony. When their Houses came to be dissolved, and their Baronies to be vested in the Crown, it might fairly have been made a question, whether the Tenants in Chivalry of those Abbots and Priours should not hold their Lands of the King after the Dissolution of their Houses, by the same Services, and in the same manner as they held them of the Abbots and Priours before the Dissolution. But for ought that appears to me, no doubt or question was then made upon this point.

The chief design of the Statute of the thirtyseventh year of K Henry VIII, was to ease the English of the burdens belonging to Knight-service. For though much is said therein about tenure in Capite, yet it appears that tenure by Knight Service was meant; for the Statute centers and concludes in this, that men shall not be compelled to sue any livery, make fine for alienation, and the rest. Which were acts or incidents belonging onely to Tenure by Barony, or to Knight-service not embaronied, or to Sergeanty, or in fine to Tenure which did partake of Knight-service.

Thus it appeareth that in K Henry the Eighth's reign, they did not neatly distinguish between tenure of the King in Capite by Knight-service, and Tenure of the King in Capite of other kinds.

In every one of these Statutes we may plainly see how the Penman of it labours and toils to make his meaning understood. In vain; it was not possible for him to speak clearly upon a subject, of which he had but a confused notion.

Before these Statutes of K Henry VIII, there never was, for ought that I know, an Honor created or erected by Statute. And therefore it was not well done of the Lord Chief Justice Coke, to refer the Students in the Law to these Statutes (u), in order to acquire a right Knowledge of the nature of an Honor. Because the Artificial and Nominal Honors erected by those Statutes, will not probably conduce to give men an exact notion of an Ancient and Real Honor.

In the twelfth year of K Charles II, a Statute was made entitled, "An Act for taking away the Court of Wards and Liveries, and Tenures in Capite, and by Knight-service, and Purveyance, &c". It is enacted thereby, that the Court of Wards and Liveries, and all Wardships, Liveries, Primer seifins and Outsterlemains, values and forfeitures of Marriages be taken away, &c. And that all Tenures by Knights service of the King or of any other person, and by Knights service in Capite, and by Socage in Capite

(u) Cok. Lit. cap. 9. sect. 159. p 108.

Capite of the King, and the fruits and consequents thereof be taken away ——. section 1.

And that all Tenures hereafter to be created by the Kings Majesty, his heirs or successors, upon any Grant of any Estate of Inheritance, shall be in Free and common Socage, and not by Knight's service, or in Capite, and shall be discharged of all Wardship, value and forfeiture of Marriage, Livery, Primer seisin, Ousterlemaine, Aid pur faire fitz chevalier, and pur file marrier, sect 4. (w).

But by very ill luck the Penner of this Statute put-in the words Tenure in Capite. Which words have basely entangled the subject matter, and rendred the Statute in some measure illusory.

To enact that there shall be no Tenure in Capite is, in my humble apprehension, an Incongruity: And even a Statute cannot make an Incongruity congruous.

Particularly, the said Statute of the Twelfth year of K. Charles II would have been congruous, if care had been taken to mention things in it distinctly. For example. This might have been the Plan of that Statute.

To take-away Knight-service with all its fruits, properties, incidents, and pertinencies, to wit, Wardship, Marriage, Relief, Livery, Escheage, Aid pur faire fitz chevalier, and the rest.

To save Baronage, or rather the Simple Homage belonging to it. By Simple Homage I mean Homage without Knight-service or the fruits, incidents or properties of it, and consisting onely in an honourary dependance on the Crown.

To save Sergeanties which were to be performed either at the Kings Coronation or otherwise; but to strip them of Knight-service, and all the properties thereof.

To save Hereditary Offices (which were a sort of Sergeanties) mixt or attended with Knight-service or Chivalerian Duties, but to strip them of all Chivalerian properties and Duties.

To save to the King all Escheats of Lands of his immediate Tenants.

To take-away Wardship, &c. from tenure in Socage, if anywhere by custom or otherwise it was attended with Wardship or Marriage, (w) Statut. 12 Car. 2. cap. 24. sect. 1, 4.

Marriage, &c. and from any other Tenure which carried Wardship, Marriage, &c. with it; if there was any such Tenure.

To take-away and abolish the Court of Wards and Liveries.

In fine, perhaps a few other Clauses and Explanations might have been added which are not here mentioned.

The Design of the Statute of the Twelfth Year of K Charles II was, to take away Knight-service, and the Court of Wards and liveries; which Court was founded upon that tenure.

If therefore the words Tenure in Capite had been wholly left out of this Statute, and not at all mentioned therein, all the ends of the Statute would have been fully answered, and the Statute it self would have been plain and consistent. For instance. If the Statute had onely said, Tenure by Knight-service shall be or is hereby taken-away; Then, Tenure in Capite by Knight-service had been effectually taken-away, without any more Words. For if you take-away Tenure by Knight-service, there can be no Tenure in Capite by Knight-service; because there cannot be a species or a modus of a non-existent.

All Tenure in Capite cannot be taken away.

BUT the truth of the matter is this. Tenure in Capite cannot be taken-away, without taking-away not onely Knight-service but all other Tenure too.

It is to be known, that in England there were anciently seven Principal sorts of Tenure, to wit, Tenure in Almoigne or Frankalmoigne, Tenure by Barony, by Knight-service, by Sergeanty, in Socage, in Burgage, and in Villenage. Now, I do but just mention the Tenure in Frankalmoigne and that in Villenage; and to dismiss them; in regard they are foreign to the present subject of Discourse.

A man was said to hold of the King in Capite, by each of the said Tenures, of Baronage, Knight-service, Sergeanty, Socage or Burgage.

Note, Tenure in Capite in Socage is taken away by the Stat. of 12 C. 2.

For example. Before the Statute of the twelfth of K Charles II, there was Tenure in Capite in Socage.

Tenure

Tenure in Socagio in Capite.

IN the eighteenth year of K. Richard II, the Abbot of Nuttele held a Tenement in Tragelthorp in Lincolnshire of the King in Capite in Socage, by the yearly rent of a Cap lined with fine linen, and one pair of Gilt spurs (x).

In the three and thirtieth year of Q. Elisabeth, Thomas Owen Esquire held certain land of the Queen in Capite in Socage (y).

Then superveneth the Statute of the twelfth of K. Charles II. This Statute saith, Tenure in Capite shall be and is thereby taken-away. Now if this Statute had taken away Tenure in Socage; then, Tenure in Capite in Socage had, no doubt, been taken-away. For where there is no Tenure in Socage, there cannot be Tenure in Capite in Socage. On the other side, if there is any Tenure in Socage in being, there will be, of necessity, Tenure in Capite in Socage somewhere; particularly of the King the Chief Lord and Sovereign of the Realm. For if a man holdeth of the King in Socage; immediately or sine medio, he is in reality the Kings Tenant in Capite in Socage, whether we call him Tenant in Capite or not.

Moreover, before the said Statute of the twelfth of K. Charles II, there was Tenure in Capite in Burgage; as appeareth by several instances fet-down in another Work (z).

How then doth this Statute operate upon Tenure in Capite in Burgage?

(z) Firma Burgi, cap. 1. sect. 8.

Burgage? Doth it take-away Tenure in Capite in Burgage? I apprehend it doth not take it away. For whilst Tenure in Burgage is in being, there will be Tenure in Capite in Burgage somewhere; that is, it will remain and be either in Name or Reality; as hath been said just above concerning Tenure in Socage.

I suppose nobody will oppose me, by saying, that the phrase Tenure in Capite is abolished by this Statute last mentioned: For I am not here reasoning about Words but things.

Some Estates were Baronial, that is, holden by Barony and Knight-service: Others, Chivalerian, that is holden by Knight-service only. Without Knight-service Tenure by Barony could not subsist: For which reason we may fairly say, that by taking away Knight-service, Tenure by Barony is virtually taken-away.

Estates in Land were denominated either Noble or Base according to the Tenure of them. If the Tenure and Service were Noble, the Estate was deemed Noble; if the Tenure and Service were Base or Mean, the Estate was deemed Base or Mean. So that when Knight-service was abolished in England, the Estates of the Nobility and Gentry became greatly disparaged and debased: Of Baronial and Chivalerian, they were made Socagial. They were changed from the Service of the Shield, to the Service of the Plow; from Noble and Gentlemanly Estates, to Estates Vulgar, and Peasantly. Infomuch that from thenceforth, he who was wont to be styled Sir Knight or Gentleman, might, in respect of his Tenure, merit to be called Goodman Farmer or Goodman Burgefs.

All Tenure must be taken away with Tenure in Capite.

WHAT hath been spoken upon this head sheweth, that Tenure in Capite cannot be taken away without taking-away all Tenure.

And at this day, where a City or Town payeth the Crown a Fee-ferm, that sheweth ex ipso jure, that such City or Town is holden of the Crown in Capite or immediately in Burgage.

When Knight-service was first instituted, it was universally thought an Honourable Tenure. No Tenure was in greater esteem than it. I might except Barony. But I need not. For Barony rony was Knight-service embaronied, that is, Knight-service enlarged and erected into a Barony, or if you please, made a Barony at its first creation. In process of time Knight-service was counted burthenfome. Men became weary of the manifold duties, prestations and cumbrances belonging to it. Being weary of them, they found by degrees an opportunity to get relief against them; namely by getting the Tenure it self abolished. This was done or intended to be done by the Statute of the Twelfth year of K Charles II, concerning which I have briefly discoursed in this Volume and in the History of the Exchequer.

CHAPTER V.

Grand Serjanties in Capite.

Ikwife Grand Serjanties were also holden of the King in Capite. It is to be remembred, that this Serjanty was a Servitium, a Service; but it was a peculiar kind of Service, different from each of the other kinds of Service.

In the reign of K Edward II, Thomas de Warblynton held the Manour of Shirefeld in Hampshire, of the King in Chief, by the Serjanty of being Mareschal of the Whores [who hapned to be found] in the Kings houshold, and of dismembring malefactors condemned, and of measuring the Galons and Busshels in the Kings houshold (a).

In or about the fifth year of K Edward III, John de Perton held the Manour of Perton in Staffordshire of the King in Capite by

In the seventeenth year of K Henry VI, Robert Umfravill held the Castle of Herbotell and the Manour of Oterburn, of the King in Capite, by the Service of Keeping the Valley and Liberty of Riddefdale, where the said Castle and Manour are situated, from Wolves and Robbers. Which Service was adjudged to be the Service of a Great Serjanty. In this case, the Court of Exchequer ordered that Search be made in the Rolls, to find the yearly value of the said Castle and Manour. Upon Search, it was found, in one of the Books of Knights Fees, in the custody of the Kings Remembrancer, that Gilbert de Humframvill held Reddesdall, per Regalem potestatem, by Royal Power (c). what was meant by Royal Power. There was no species of Tenure in England, known by the name of Tenure by Royal Power. Therefore I do humbly apprehend, that in this case the Tenure was by Barony, accompanied with the full Power of a Lord Marcher foreagainſt Scotland; like that Baronial Power, which was anciently veſted in the Earl of Cheſter for the time being, or ſome other great Lord-Marcher foreagainſt Wales.

In the twentieth year of K Henry VI, John Baker held certain land in Kent, of the King in Capite, by the Service of holding the Kings Head in the Ship, between Dovor and Whitſand, when the King went over the Sea there: Which Service was adjudged to be Grand Serjanty (d).

In the twentieth year of K Henry VI, John Love held the Manor of Bentelegb &c. of the King in Chief, by the Service of keeping the Haye of Bentelegb: Which Service was adjudged to be the Service of a Grand Serjanty (e).

In the ſame twentieth year, John Wanſtede acknowledged in the Court of Exchequer, that he held in his demeane as in fee, a Meſuage and certain lands in Wanſtede, of the King in Capite, by the ſervice of finding one Hobeler in the Kings Caſtle of Portcheſter

And on the other side, there were some Grand Serjancies which had no kind of Knight-service belonging to them.

William de Aquilon was charged with Efcuage. But it was found by an Enquest of twelve Knights, that William did not hold by Knight-service, but by the Serjantery of finding a Cook at the Kings Coronation, to drefs Victuals in the Kings Kitchen (k).

In the tenth year of K Edward III, Isabell the Eldest, Eynecia, of the Daughters and Heireffes of Bartholomew Davyllers, made fine to the King in xls, for Relief for her purpart of the Manour of Brom in Suffolk, which together with the Manour of Erwarton, is holden of the King in Capite, by the Service of leading all the Foot soldiers of Norfolk and Suffolk, into the War against Wales, to wit, from St Edmunds Ditch near Newmarket, whithersoever the King pleased, in the said War with Wales; taking iiii d for each Man for his expences for xl days, and after xl days Bartholomew and the said Men were to continue at the Kings charges. Sire Thomas Littelton saith, that in the eleventh year of K Henry IV, Cokayne Chief Baron of the Exchequer came into the Court of Common Pleas, and brought with him a Record relating to a Grand Serjanty. William Hankeford and the other Justices of the Common Bench declared, that the case then produced before them was a Grand Serjantie. And no doubt it was. Hereupon, Cokayne demanded, whether in that case the Tenant should pay one years value of the land for Relief. Ad quod, saith Littelton, non fuit responsum (m). As if the question asked by Cokayne was a Secret in the Law. Far otherwife. For it was a Thing well known and settled. Protections from a Bishop.

IN the reign of K Henry II, Hilary Bishop of Chichester issued a Precept under his Seal, to William Fitz-Gervase and Master Serlo. It setteth-forth, "That the Bishop remembred, that William Fitz-odo did, for the health of his Soul, grant in the Bishops presence, to the Church of St Peter of Perham, and to Alberic the Bishops Clerk, one virgate of land quit of all secular service. Wherefore the Bishop commandeth the said William Fitz-Gervase and Master Serlo, that they do not exact any Secular service from the said virgate, nor turn a Frankalmoigne into Servitude (w).

SOME men when they would assert, that such Ruler or Rulers have an Independent authority, have affected to say of them, that they hold de Deo & Sole, of God and the Sun. It ought to content them to say, that they hold of God: But when they add of the Sun, they apply terms that are deceitful and dangerous. The Sun is Inanimate; not having a Mind or Intelligence. It imparteth Light and Heat, but by no means Power or Authority. And no Christian man believeth, that Moloch or any other pretended Deity resideth in it; or that God and the Sun have a joint empire over Mankind. Upon the whole, it is my humble opinion, that these terms, to hold of the Sun, ought to be rejected as rash and capricious.

cum Dominus Johannes Rex Angliæ avus Regis nunc, per cartam suam, pro se & hæredibus suis, dedisset & concessisset Ricardo de Sproxton, pro avo prædicti Roberti, cujus hæres ipse est, Manerium de Sproxton cum pertinentiis, Habendum & tenendum eidem Ricardo & hæredibus suis, de præfato avo Regis & hæredibus suis, per servitium quartæ partis feodi unius Militis, & pro una marcata redditus sibi & hæredibus suis singulis annis reddenda. Et dictus Ricardus ratione earundem donationis & concessionis, in seifina ejusdem Manerii existens, redditum illum dicto avo Regis, secundum tenorem prædictæ cartæ, solverit, præfatus Willelmus asserens Manerium illud de ipso, & non de Rege, teneri, redditum illum a præfato Roberto exigit, & ipsum ea de causa graviter distrinxit, & multipliciter inquietat, in Regis exhæredationem manifestam, & prædicti Roberti grave dampnum, &c. Et unde queritur, quod prædictus Willelmus die Lunæ proximo post festum Sancti Johannis Baptistæ, anno regni Regis nunc Terциодецимо, in campis de Sproxton cepit, & capere fecit decem boves & duos affros de Caruca, & ea adhuc detinet, & sic fecit & fieri fecit intolerabiles distractiones de anno in annum, & de die in diem, super prædictum Robertum, Ita quod terram suam non potuit arare; attrahendo sibi homagium & servitium prædicti Roberti, de prædicta terra de Sproxton, quod Domino Regi pertinet, in exhæredationem Domini Regis, & dampnum ipsius Roberti sexaginta librarum &c. & hoc offert verificare, sicut Curia consideraverit pro ipso Domino Rege & seipso, &c.

Et Willelmus venit, & defendit vim

& injuriam, quando, &c. Et dicit, quod prædictus Robertus tenet de eo prædictam terram suam de Sproxton, per servitium unius marcæ annuatim, & similiter Willelmus pater prædicti Roberti tenuit de Roberto de Ros, patre prædicti Willelmi, cujus hæres ipse est. Ita, quod iste idem Robertus fuit in custodia prædicti Roberti de Ros, patris ipsius Willelmi. Et bene dicit, quod bene advocat rationabiles distractiones super prædictum Robertum, sicut super tenentem suum, eo quod prædictus Robertus non vult se justiciari versus prædictum Willelmum, sicut homo se debet justiciare versus Dominum suum, &c.

Et prædictus Robertus dicit, quod ipse tenet prædicta ten[ementa] de Domino Rege per servitium unius marcæ annuæ, & similiter per Servitium quartæ partis feodi unius militis, sicut continetur in Carta Regis Johannis facta prædicto Petro antecessori suo, & quod Dominus Rex qui nunc est, & similiter Rex Henricus pater Regis nunc, & Johannes Rex avus Regis, ab anno septimo Regis Johannis usque nunc, continue extiterunt in seifina de prædicto Servizio. Quæ quidem Carta irrotulata est coram Domino Rege, &c. in rotulis Gilberti de Thornton, videlicet in Rotulo Sancti Hillarii, anno regni Regis nunc, vicesimo primo. Et super hoc Nicolaus de Warre[wico], qui sequitur pro Rege, scrutari fecit rotulos de Scaccario, qui hoc idem testantur, ut asserit. Et prædictus Robertus dicit expresse, quod tenet prædicta ten[ementa] de Domino Rege. Et de ipso, & hæredibus suis tenere clamat. Et plane disadvocat prædictum Willelmum. Et quæsitum est de prædicto Willelmo, si gratis concedere velit, quod prædictus Robertus to him in these terms, to hold to him and his heirs, or to him and his heirs for ever. Such Grant was commonly expressed to be pro homagio suo, or pro servitio suo, or pro homagio & servitio suo; and was called a Feofment, Feoffamentum, Feffamentum, and now and then Feodamentum (e); because it was a Conveyance of an estate in Fee, in seudo or feodo. When a Deed was made pro homagio, or pro servitio suo, and did at the same time reserve a Rent in money to the person granting, then it created a sort of a mixt estate, partly Feodal, and partly Censual or Reditual, that is, consisting in Rent. In strictness, so far as an estate was Reditual, so far it lost the nature of a Feodal or Feodal estate. However, in that case it was generally called an estate in Fee or Fee-simple; for two plain reasons; One, as by custom Fee was applied to signify an hereditary or perpetual estate: The other, as the Feodal estate was deemed more noble than the Reditual, and therefore might well prevail in giving the denomination. When therefore an estate in Fee was holden under a Rent reserved, the estate was said to be holden by Rent-service. Somewhat improperly. For in truth, Rent was not Service. But in regard it was to be in lieu of Service, men affected to call it Service; which was the more honourable name. And whilst an estate granted under a Rent reserved, was by custom called Feodum, Fee; the Rent was called Rent-service, by uniformity of speaking (f).

FIRST. Homage must be done to that person or persons in whom the Seignourage is vested.

The doing of Homage and Fealty to the King was formerly accounted a matter so considerable that many times the King issued an Open Letter under his Great Seal, to empower Commissioners to take Homage and the oath of Fealty of his feudatary or Chevalerian Tenant.

K. Edward III in the eighth year of his reign, by a Patent Letter under his Great Seal, empowered William Trussel and Master Richard de Bynteworth Doctor of Civil Law, to receive of the Earl of Savoy the Homage and Fealty which the Earl was bound to do for all the Lands, Castles and Lordships, which the Earl held of the King, and to do all other acts relating thereunto, and also to deliver to the Earl empty possession and seifine of the said Lands, Castles and Lordships, with the pertinencies (i).

Scotia. Dominus Rex mandavit Vicecomiti Northumbriæ per breve suum, quod cum ex gravi querimonia Magdulphi filii Malculmi Comitis de Fif acceperat, quod, cum idem Dominus Rex nuper, dum erat apud Berewik super Twedam dedisset Venerabili patri W Episcopo S Andreæ, & Sociis suis Custodibus prædicti regni Scotiæ in mandatis, ut de terris & tenementis Magdulphi prædicti de Rerys & de Crey, de quibus per dictum Episcopum tunc Custodem Comitatus de Fif, conquerebatur se esse deforciatum injuste, sibi justitiam exhiberent & demum juxta formam mandati prædicti, per considerationem prædictorum Custodum, seisinam terrarum & tenementorum hujusmodi recuperasset, Johannes Rex Scotiæ, de eisdem terris & tenementis, injuste disseisivit eundem, in ipsius dampnum non modicum & gravamen. Et ne jus suum prosequeretur ulterius, fecit eundem carcerali custodiæ mancipari, & tandem super dictis terris & tenementis, quoddam iniquum reddi judicium contra eum. Et cum postmodum a carcere liberatus, prædictum Regem requisivit, instanter & pluries, quod ipsum in jure suo, curaret audire, & super petitione sua, quam faciebat de prædictis terris & tenementis, sibi facere jus & justiciæ complementum. Offerens se paratum docere de prædicto jure suo per literas, & alia legitima documenta. Idem Rex omnia illa sibi contra jus & justiciam denegando facere recusavit. Propter quod mandatum fuit Vicecomiti prædicto, quod prædicto Regi Scotiæ, Literas Domini Regis in propria persona sua, deferret, sufficienti testimonio secum adhibito de adjornando ipsum Regem Scotiæ, essendi coram Domino Rege ad hunc diem ad respondendum prædicto Magdulpho super præmissis, & ad faciendum, & ad recipiendum ulterius, quod justitia requireret. Et modo venit prædictus Rex, & prædictus Magdulphus. Et idem Magdulphus queritur, quod cum coram Episcopo prædicto, & Sociis suis Custodibus regni Scotiæ, seisinam de terris & tenementis prædictis recuperavit, præfatus Rex de eisdem terris & tenementis injuste disseisivit eundem. Et ne jus suum ulterius prosequeretur contra eum, fecit eum incarcerari, & contra vadium & plegios detineri, & contra ipsum sic incarceratum super dictis terris & tenementis, quoddam falsum judicium reddi fecit. Et cum postmodum a carcere prædicto liberatus fuisset, requisivit ipsum Regem instanter & pluries, quod ipsum in jure suo curaret audire, & ei justiciam in Curia sua exhiberet super præmissis. Quod quidem prædictus Rex Scotiæ, eidem denegando justitiam, totaliter facere recusavit, in contemptum Domini Regis Angliæ, superioris Domini Regni Scotiæ, decem mille marcarum, Et ad dampnum suum septem centum marcarum. Et hoc paratus est probare sicut Curia consideraverit, &c.

Et Johannes Rex Scotiæ, venit & defendit omnem contemptum Domini Regis Domini sui: Et dicit, quod non habet diem hic ad respondendum præfato Magdulpho de aliquo, &c.

Et idem Magdulphus dicit, quod prædictus Rex Scotiæ habet diem hic ad hunc diem ad respondendum sibi Magdulpho per adjornamentum sibi factum per breve Domini Regis. Quod quidem breve sibi liberatum fuit, per Vicecomitem Northumbriæ apud Strivelyn,

He held his hands joined between the hands of his Lord, and said, "I become your Man from this day forward, for life and " limb,

lyn, in crastino Sancti Petri ad vingu-
la. Quod satis constare potest per re-turnum Vicecomitis prædicti.

Et Rex Scotiæ quæsitus si hujusmodi breve Domini Regis sibi ex parte Domini Regis per Vicecomitem præ-dictum liberatum fuit, Dicit, quod sic;
Et quod semper paratus est & erit bre-
via & mandata Domini Regis, ut Domini sui, admittere. Et ideo dictum est ei, quod ipse returnet breve illud, prout in brevi illo plenius continetur.
Qui dicit, quod breve illud ad manum non habet, sed illud tradidit Cancel-lario suo partibus suis. Qui quidem Cancellarius super hoc per ipsum Re-gem Scotiæ examinatus, Dicit, quod illud non habet, Et si illud invenire posset libenter Domino suo redderet.
Et quia idem Rex Scotiæ bene cognoscit, quod breve illud admisit per quod adornatus fuit hic ad hunc diem ad respondendum præfato Magdulpho, dictum est eidem Regi, quod præfato Magdulpho respondeat.

Et Rex Scotiæ, dicit quod ipse est
Rex Regni Scotiæ, nec prædicto Magdulpho ad querelam suam, nec de al-liquo regnum suum tangente ausus est respondere sine consilio proborum hominum regni sui.

Et præfatus Magdulphus petit judicium de ipso Rege, tanquam de indefenso, ex quo præsens est in Curia
Regis per adornamentum ei factum per breve Regis, quod cognovit se recepisse, nec aliquid ei respondet. Et super hoc dictum est eidem Regi Scotiæ per Dominum suum Regem Angliæ, quod idem Rex Scotiæ est Homo suus Ligius de prædicto regno Scotiæ, de quo fecit ei Homagium & fi-delitatem, & est coram eo hic adjor-natus, quod respondeat, vel dicat quare nolit, vel non debeat hic coram eo respondere.

Et idem Rex Scotiæ dicit sicut prius
dixit, quod de aliquo regnum suum contingente non est ausus, nec potest hic respondere, inconsultis probis Hominibus regni sui. Et super hoc quia idem Rex Scotiæ dicit, quod non au-sus est hic respondere, inconsultis pro-bis Hominibus regni sui, dictum est ei, quod requirat alium diem ad consulendum si voluerit. Qui præcise respondet, quod nullum diem requiret, nec aliquod adornamentum hic admittet.

Postea venit prædictus Rex Scotiæ
coram Domino Rege & Consilio suo, & fecit Domino Regi, quandam sup-plicationem ore suo proprio per verba
subscripta, & eadem verba in quadam Cedula scripta per manum suam por-rexit, &c. Sire, Jeo suy vostre Homme

Dominus Rex habito super hoc consi-lio ad rogatum prædictum prædicti
Regis Scotiæ, & etiam ad instantiam
Procerum & Magnatum de Consilio suo, ex gratia sua speciali, & similiter de consensu prædicti Magdulphi, concessit ipsi Regi Scotiæ, Supplicationem
suam prædictam, & diem ei dedit ad

THE terms to vest or invest, investiture, &c. seem to be of Feudal original. They came early into use among other Feudal terms; and have continued from age to age unto this day; as persons conversant in these things do well know. In the year 977, the Abbot of Bobio was invested of certain great lands and possessions, according to a Charter made to him by Otho the Emperor (s). And in the year 1076, Lanfranco Abbot of Bobbio made an Obligation, together with the Patron of his House, that he or his Successors would not alienate or engage such part of their Lands, by Security, or by Investiture, or by Commendation, or by Beneficium, or by Exchange, or by any other Device by himself, or by any other person, either Clerical or Laical (t).

In England, in the reign of K Henry I, there was great Contest and much Discourse about the investitures of Bishopricks as appeareth by Eadmer and others.

In this case I doubt the ancient Kings of England forgot themselves.

In times of old, when the King gave a Bishop, an Abbot, an Earl, Baron, or other great Tenant in Capite, saisine of the lands and rents belonging to his Bishoprick, Abbey, Honor, Barony, or Tenancy, such delivery of saisine was usually called Investiture. Because the Bishop, Abbot, Earl, Baron, or Military Tenant did thereby become vested and seised of his Fee or Tenancy.

So it was also in Foreign Countries. When a man was feoffed and had seisin given him, he was said to be invested.

CHAPTER VII.

Did once purpose to give an account in this book, of the Rise and Progress of Feudal Tenure in England. But I have not yet found leisure to discuss that Subject. I shall only touch it lightly.

The Feudal Settlement, by its Gallantry and Splendour, prevailed over all other Laws and Customs, which were not consistent with it. If there were any remains of the Laws and Institutes of the Native Inhabitants of Britaine, if any Laws and usages of the Romans, if any of the Saxons or Danes, they all gave place to the Splendid Feudal Laws and Institutes.

The Feudal Settlement changed the Nature and Denomination of all Estates or Possessions: It changed the Course of Inheritance. It alter'd the Form and Face of the Royal Palace, and of the Houses and Households of all Lords and Gentlemen. So that it was a novum Seculum.

He that would form a distinct notion of Feudal Tenure with its Services and Appendices, must regulate his conception by the different state in which Feudal Tenures were, in several ages or periods of time. The most ancient State of them is not to be confounded with the Subsequent, nor the Subsequent with the Ancient. That is to say, we must distinguish between the ancient Beneficia, and the Feuda or Feoda in the succeeding times. Because in process of time they much varied from what they were in their first Rise or Institution.

He who shall go about to prove, that the Laws and Customs of the Anglosaxons, were the same with the Laws and Customs settled in England since the Norman Conquest, will (if I can guess right) at once lose his labour, and discover his want of Judgment.

Mr Selden supposeth there was Feudal Tenure in England in the Anglosaxon times. But this he speaketh doubtingly; for in the same sentence he acknowledgeth, that Military Fiefs were not settled in England before the Conquest, in like manner as after it (u). In another place he speaks as if he thought the dignities of Ealdorman or Earl and Thane were Honorary and Feudal in the Saxon times: But this he speaks faintly. In the same clause he seems to admit, that the Titles of Earl and Baron have prevailed or been settled with us since the coming of the Normans (w). And in the same page he owneth, that he had not found the word Consul or Dux for an Earl, used in any Publick Record of the Kings Courts since the accession of the Normans, but always the word Comes (x).

I do not say, none of the Feudal Customs were then received or admitted in England. But I think there is no appearance that the Feudal Law had then any Vigour or Settlement in England.

In the reigns of K K William I and II, and of K Henry I, the Feudal Customs and Dialect were a-planting in England; and in the reign of K Henry II they became settled, and, as it were, established here.

There could be no Feudal or Military Tenure, without Feofment, without Homage and Fealty, without Wardship, Marriage and Relief.

Jus Feodale Anglofaxon.

I demand, by what name the Anglofaxons called Feofment, Homage, and Fealty, Wardship, Marriage, and Relief: And so for the rest.

The Truth is, they had none of these things amongst them, either in name or in reality. On the contrary, their language was quite different.

Many men have thought that the Feudal Law was first introduced by the Longobards. Several things have casually concurred to settle that opinion. When a thing, suppose a Handwriting, or piece of Workmanship, was antique, they often used, both in Spain and Italy, to call it Gothick or Longobardick. And in those Countries, when they called any thing Gothick or Longobardick, they generally meant little more than that the thing was ancient,

rude,

(u) In England, before the Normans, plainly were Military Fiefs, although not in in like manner as since. Tit. Hon. edit. in quarto A D 1614. p 300.

(w) Having thus gone through the dignities of Ealdorman or Earl and Thane, which were honorary and Feudal in the Saxon Times, we come to the Titles of Earl and Baron, as they have succeeded them, and be in use with us since the coming of the Normans. Seldens Tit. Hon. p 526. sect. 7. edit. A D 1672, in Folio.

rude, or unlike to the usage of the then present age. In an ancient memoria it is said, they made and set-up boundaries or land-marks, according to the Law of the Goths (y). In the year DCCCCLX, mention is made of certain Books written in Gothick or Gothick. Longobardick characters (z). Mention is also made of a Book of very great antiquity, written in Longobardick letters (a). In fine, some men have said, that the Laws of the Lombards were not inferior to the Laws of Justinian (b). By the terms Longobardick Laws, they commonly meant the Feudal Laws: Because the Feudal Laws were by many men supposed to have been first brought-in by the Lombards.

Another reason which hath led some persons to believe the Lombards were the first Planters of the Feudal Laws, might be this; because some Lombards appeared early in Publishing and Commenting on Collections of those Laws. Such were Obertus de Orto and Gerardus Niger; who in their times were Consuls of Milan, as Nicolas Rigaltius hinteth (c); and long after them, Antonius Mincuccius de Prato Veteri a Doctor of Laws at Bolonia (d). But this reason doth not move me.

The Feudal Laws and Customs were first brought in by the Franco-galli.

The Feudal System. Consociation.

THE old way of Feoffing for Homage and Service was an excellent means to unite and consociate men together. Thus a Great Lord and his Franktenants by Chivalry were in a fort all of one Family.

I have said before, that the Feudal System and Consociation was very Fine. But in truth, it was too fine and delicate to last many ages together; especially under Vicissitudes.

Feudal Gallantry.

THE Feudal Customs did first give rise to Baronial and Knightly Gallantry. In the Kingdoms where these Customs have been established, there the Chivalerian Splendour was chiefly to be found. The renowned Kingdoms of England and France are great instances of this.

The Knightly Customs abovementioned refuse to grow or flourish in the homely territories of a Commonwealth or popular State.

CHAPTER VIII.

Holy War.

FTER the Feudal institutes were settled and brought into form, a new scene of Valour and Glory was opened. The Trompet founded for the Holy War. All Christendom began to move. Kings, Princes, Earls, Barons, Knights put-on Armour. Every body strove to excell each other in Prowess. There was likewise no small emulation to excell in Splendour and Gallantry of equipage. There, they shone with Oriflambes and rich Banners, Armorial Cognifances, Gold, Silver, Velvet, Purple, fine Cloths, costly Tents and Pavilions, and many other precious things; so that the like ornaments and costly things were never before brought together in so great quantity (e). But such was the Will of God-Almighty, they failed in their attempts. The Holy War lasted long. It produced new Orders or Societies of Knighthood; the Templars, the Hospitalers of St John of Jerusalem, the Hospitalers of St Mary, commonly called the Teutonical Order. In these and other Orders, Religion and Knighthood, Ceremonies of Piety and Romance were strangely mixed together.

The Holy War made a great Impression upon the minds of men: It moved them with Knightly ardour.

When the Holy War was ended, and the Lords and Knights returned to their own Countries, they retained in their breasts the Love of Glory and Gallantry: So that it became long afterwards very difficult to check or restrain them.

This humour, as it seemeth, produced torneying and jousting. I will give the Reader a taste of the violent love they had for Tournaments.

Torneaments.

Torneaments.

IN the first year of K Henry III, several Earls, Barons, Knights and others met together at Bly to tourney. The King sent to them a Patent Letter under his Great Seal. It imported, that whereas the tranquillity of the Realm was at present tender, and capable of being easily disturbed; therefore the King commanded, and firmly charged them upon their Allegiance, and as they loved themselves and all that they had, not to tourney (as they once intended) at Bly, or any where else; recommending it to them, so to behave themselves in this case, that the King might not have occasion to punish them in their Bodies and Chattells (f).

K Henry III, in the sixteenth year of his reign, was going into Shropshire, to treat with Lewelin Prince of Abberfran. He heard that several persons intended to meet together at the Round Table. Hereupon the King, by a close Letter of his Great Seal, commandeth the said persons upon their allegiance, that they do straitway follow him, and not presume to meet at the Round Table to turney, against this prohibition; declaring that if they did meet to turney, the King would so forely punish them in their Bodies and Chattells, that they should feel the smart of his displeasure; and besides that, he would not suffer them at any time after to turney in the Kingdom of England (g).

(g) De Rotunda Tabula prohibenda.

Rex omnibus fidelibus suis, qui conventuri sunt ad Rotundam Tabulam, salutem.

In the thirtieth year of K Henry III, several persons had agreed to meet at Gudeford, to tourney. The King by a writ of his Great Seal, commandeth, that they do not tourney, bordier, or do any acts pertaining to Arms, either there or elsewhere, without leave. The Abbot of Waverli, and the Prior of Novel-lieu were sent by the King to make this Inhibition (b).

In the fiftyseventh year of K Henry III, several Earls, Barons, Knights, and others were to meet at Warwick to turney. The King sent them a Mandamus or Injunction, commanding them, under their Faith, Homage and Affection, and under pain of losing their lands, tenements, and all the goods they had in his Realm, that they do not presume to tourney, make juffs, seek adventures, or go to feats of arms, either at Warwick or any where else in the Realm, without the Kings exprefs leave. Assuring them, that if they acted contrary to this Mandate, he would take their lands, tenements, and all their goods into his hand, and retain them as forfeited to him. This was a Patent Writ, issuing out of the Kings Chancery (i).

In the twenty-seventh year of K Edward I, a Writ or Precept issued to the Sherif of the Counties of Salop and Stafford, commanding him to make publick Proclamation in the Cities, boroughs, market-towns, and other proper places in his bailywick, and to inhibit on the Kings behalf, that no man under forfeiture of Life, limbs, lands and tenements, and of all that he hath in the Realm, do presume to turney, bourdize, make jufts or congregations, or otherwise go to arms, within the Realm, without the Kings particular licence. This was a close Letter of Proclamation under the Great Seal. The like Letters of the same Date were directed to the severall Sherifs of England (k). King Edward I, in the twentyeighth year of his reign, sent a close Letter under his Great Seal, dated at Berwick upon Twede, to the Sherif of Yorkshire. By it the King declareth, that he would not have any Turneaments, burdises, or jufts, performed by any men in the Realm, whilst the War between him and his Enemies continued. Therefore he commandeth, and firmly enjoineth the Sherif, to make publick Proclamation in Cities, boroughs, market-towns, and other fit places, all over his Bailywick, and on the Kings behalf straitly to inhibit, that no Knight, Esquire, or other person under forfeiture of life, members, and all that he possesseth in the Kingdom, do by any means presume to torney, bordise, make jufts, seek adventures, or otherwise go to arms, without the Kings special license. K Edward II in the beginning of his reign awarded Writs of Proclamation to the Sherifs of England, commanding them to forbid and hinder tourneying and justing within their Bailiwicks. Notwithstanding that Prohibition, several Earls, Barons, Knights and others, proclaimed a Justing to be holden at Leicester, at a day by them prefixed; which the King very much wondred at, and was highly displeased with it. Whereupon the King, in the second year of his reign, sent an open Letter under his Great Seal, to the Earls, Barons, Knights and others, straitly inhibiting them, that they do not presume, under grievous forfeiture, to turney or just either at Leicester, or any where else in the Kings Dominions, without his special leave (p).

If any men disobeyed the King's Proclamations or Mandates issued upon these occasions, the King used to send Mandates to the Sherifs of England, commanding them to attach the persons so offending, and to seize their lands, tenements, goods and chattels into the King's hand.

K Edward I, in the thirtyfourth year of his reign, issued close Letters of Proclamation in this form. The King to the Sherif of Shropshire greeting.
